QUARRYVILLE, BAINBRIDGE (Lancaster Co.) — If your last name is O'Connell, Donovan, or O'Grady, perhaps your relatives owned a few head of the world's smallest purebred breed of cattle.

Originating in Ireland, Irish Dexter Cattle have made the jump across the ocean to America and into the hearts of their owners.

According to information from the American Dexter Cattle Association (ADCA), based in Prairie Home, Mo., early Dexter cattle were selected

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — Grain producers at a marketing conference here Tuesday heard strategies to help them make the most out of corn and soybean selling.

They also listened to a long-range weather forecast calling for "normal" conditions this year.

About 70 people attended the conference sponsored by the Lehigh Valley Grain Producers Assocation.

While corn usage in the U.S. has been increasing, generally good growing conditions across the country have kept supplies up since the mid-1990s, said Iowa market analyst Scott Davis.

"For the last six years, we've nailed trendline corn yields," Davis said.

Since 1998, a "captive" corn market has barely strayed out of the $1.85 to $2.35 per bushel trading range, $0.40 to $0.45 cheaper than it should be ac-

HERSHEY (Lancaster Co.) — About 300 industry representatives and government officials from several Mid-Atlantic states attended the annual fruit and vegetable growers dinner Tuesday evening.

After dinner, Sam Hayes, Jr., secretary of agriculture, remarked that "as important as the military is, so too is agriculture. One of the great strategic strengths of America is agriculture. To sustain and support our agriculture is one of the things for you and I to live independently and without dependence on other nations.

"I hope that there will never be a day that we say that it's no longer possible for us to feed ourselves as a nation. We cannot push agriculture from our shores.

"We are bound together voca-

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
January 30, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

"Old Man Winter" finally made it to the Midwest and beneficial moisture in hard red winter wheat areas, pressured bids lower. Forecasts call for a substantial amount of snow in many winter wheat growing areas which eased concerns over crop damage. Additional liquidation was seen in wheat pits again today. Light export demand overnight offered no support to wheat. Corn bids were narrowly mixed. Light support came from Taiwan's overnight corn order. Declines in soybean bids, limited advances in corn bids. Beans remained under pressure by continued rain in South American.

Wheat 1 to 5 cents lower. Corn mixed. Sorghum 1 cent lower Soybeans mostly 1 cent lower except So Iowa 3 cents higher.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC — THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

FEBRUARY 4–10, 2002

ST AGATHA, FEB. 5

RAIN OR SHINE?

Umbrellas were first used in ancient Mesopotamia as sunshades. In fact, the word umbrella comes from the Latin umbra, for 'shade' or 'shadow.' In the late 1500s, umbrellas started to become popular in the Western world. Initially, European umbrellas were used only by women, until Jonas Hanway (1712–1786), a Persian traveler and writer, first began toting an umbrella in 1750 London whether it was raining or not. He was publicly ridiculed but after 30 years of the practice, others began to emulate him. By the time Hanway died in 1786, virtually all proper British gentlemen carried an umbrella, calling them hanways in his honor.

Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short.

William Shakespeare, English playwright (1564–1616)

OPINION

Target The Tax Issue

Recently we received the excellent newsletter, Farm Economics, published by Penn State's College of Ag Sciences. For issue 6 in 2001, the article spoke about the "important issues facing Pennsylvania local governments." Timothy W. Kelsey, Penn State associate professor of agricultural economics, wrote the story.

What are the issues of most concern to local governments?

The top concern: need for local reform of school district taxes.

The survey was done by mail, sent in the year 2000 to 474 randomly selected Pennsylvania borough and township officials (there are 2,569 local governments in Pennsylvania, by the way).

Of those, 306 responded (an astonishing 65 percent response rate).

Sixty percent of the officials responding noted that reforming school taxes was a pressing need, coming out clearly on top. Half said reforming and administration of property taxation and assessment was a pressing need.

Relatively few officials thought that issues related to spending were pressing needs.

Another pressing need: preservation of open space and infrastructure issues. But that's another editorial.

The issue is before us, and has been for quite some time: making taxation fair. Why should a farmer making $22,000 a year in taxable income pay a lot more tax for his 100 acres than a lawyer making $500,000 on his half an acre? Shouldn't tax be based on income, rather than property?

This is an issue we hope the new national administration, and an upcoming state administration, addresses in a serious way. Now, in light of this recession, could be the best time.

Now Is The Time

Lancaster County Extension Director

To Welcome New Horticulture Extension Specialist

Dr. Elsa Sanchez recently began employment as the new systems management horticulturist in the Department of Horticulture at Penn State. Her appointment is 60 percent extension and 40 percent teaching. The primary focus of the position is the development of horticultural crop production systems for smaller acreage or part-time producers. Sanchez will be developing programs concerning alternative or niche crops, production and management systems for small farms, and integrated crop management.

Sanchez earned a doctorate in horticulture at Washington State University and a master's degree in agricultural biology and a bachelor's in horticulture at New Mexico State University. She looks forward to addressing needs of the growers that farm smaller acreage of horticultural crops or farm part-time. Sanchez welcomes your suggestions on project and needs that you would like to see addressed. She can be reached at (814)-863-2433 or by e-mail at ess11@psu.edu.

To Prepare For Hiring From A Diverse Labor Pool

Dr. Judy Olian, dean of Penn State's Smeal College of Business and a leading expert in strategic human resources management, shares some revealing insights from the 2000 U.S. census released last year.

The Census indicates that about 30.5 million of the 273 million residents in the U.S. are foreign-born. Of these, about 13.5 million entered the U.S. in the last decade. While new immigrants come to the U.S. with more education than in previous decades, about 32 percent do not complete high school (compared to 10 percent of U.S.-born students). In addition, immigrants will comprise more than a third of new entrants into the work force during the next decade.

Children of baby boomers, so-called Generation Y, are another source of growth in today's work force; however, these are increasingly children of low-income families (41 percent), and only 36 percent of this income group is likely to attend college.

Olian reports another very important statistic that will impact our future hiring is that many Americans, both new and more established immigrants, are members of non-English speaking households. From the 2000 U.S Census, 45 million, or 16.5 percent, speak a language other than English at home, and 19.5 million, or 7.1 percent, speak English "less than very well."

In summary, there are fewer people attending college, there is more diversity in the work force, and an increasing percentage of the work force that is non-English speaking. Olian suggests this means employers must get into the business of educating. Escalation of skill requirements for even basic jobs and the increasing prevalence of non-English speaking residents will force employers to develop language, technical, and analytical skills wherever they find them even if that means becoming the provider of in-house education. And, to keep employees' skills current, to foster loyalty among trained workers, and to protect them against the predatory moves of competitors, employers will have to continuously update their employees' skills. To stay competitive, it will be ever more important that employers leverage diversity of every kind in the dominant category of growth in the work force. In order to utilize this talent in the labor pool, providing in-house education will be necessary.

To Install Water-Saving Devices In Your Home

The drought conditions in Pennsylvania continue to worsen as January failed to produce a significant amount of rainfall. It is imperative that all of us evaluate where we can save water.

A good place to start is in our homes. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency estimates that most households use 80 gallons of water per person per day. About 75 percent of the total water usage occurs in the bathroom. Making a few plumbing changes there can cut water usage substantially without significantly changing our lifestyle. The place to start is with your toilet.

Close to forty percent of household daily water use gets flushed down the toilet. Conventional toilets use between 5-7 gallons of water per flush. More modern toilets, which are required in many current building codes, use about 3.5 gallons per flush. The most efficient ultra-low flush toilets use only 1.6 gallons per flush. Replacing a conventional toilet with an ultra-low flush toilet can save 88 gallons per day for a family of four. That adds up to a whopping 32,000 gallons per year.

If replacing your conventional toilet is not workable for you, another alternative is to retrofit the one you have. A simple retrofit is installing toilet dams, which cost around $10 and are very simple and quick to install. Typically these devices are made of flexible stainless steel coated in plastic. Since they are flexed, they hold themselves in place in the tank. Properly installed dams can save one to two gallons per flush. Placing a glass or plastic jug in the tank can save water as well. Other devices on the market include the pop flush device and a mini flush device. These items cost around $20 and save around two gallons per flush.

Another fixture in your bathroom that should be upgraded to a water-saving model is the showerhead. Conventional showerheads use 5-8 gallons per minute. Low-flow showerheads use 2.5 gallons per minute. Most of these fixtures use an aeration device to mix air with the water droplets, making it feel like there is more water coming from the shower head than there really is. In most cases you will hardly notice the difference, but this can save up to 55 gallons for every 10 minutes of showering. These devices are easily installed and cost from $10-$40. Check the flow rate on the device you are considering and make sure it is less than three gallons per minute for maximum savings.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor:

I spent a week this past fall visiting farms in Holland and the European Union headquarters in Brussels. As I had expected, we talked about high-profile issues such as food safety, mad cows, and genetically modified organisms. But the discussions I found most interesting were about policies that would save small farms and preserve the character of rural areas.

The current member countries of the European Union (EU) have almost eight million farms, four times as many as we have in the United States. As other countries join the EU, millions more farms will come under Common Agricultural Policy. Should that policy demand that these farms "get big or get out," the path we have taken here, or should they try something else?

I think the answer depends on what you expect from a farmer. In the United States, our policies most often take a fairly narrow view of what a farmer does: plant and harvest crops, feed and care for livestock. Waves of new technology constantly make it possible for fewer people to do these vitally important tasks. Hence, we hear solutions to the farm income problem that would reduce the number of farmers. In short, we have too many farmers.

The Europeans I met took a

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

RUNNING ON 'EMPTY'

Background Scripture:
Ruth 1.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 8.

I realize that you may have little, if any, idea of who or what a Moabite is and therefore think that the story of Ruth, the Moabitess, is something quite foreign to your own life. Actually, no one knows the derivation of the terms "Moab" and "Moabite," but the problem is easily solved if you read "outsider" for "Moabite." Many of us know what it is to be an "outsider" or to have to deal with them.

The book of Ruth is not so much about "Moabites" as it is about "outsiders." Ruth was a woman of Moab, just one of a number of Israel's neighbors. The relationships with these neighbors was almost always one of suspicion, hostility, and often aggression.

Some of this hostility had to do with the fact that Israel worshiped Yahweh, while her neighbors worshiped a host of pagan deities — in Moab it was Chemosh and Ashtor-chemosh, as well as crude fertility gods and goddesses. Israel held them in disdain because the first Moabite was believed to be the fruit of an incestuous relationship between Lot, the nephew of Abraham, and Lot's own daughter.

Resident Aliens

So it is ironic that an Israelite, Elimelech, went to Moab with his wife, Naomi, to live there as resident aliens. Why? Verse 6 implies that Israel experienced a considerable famine. Whereas Elimelech's home, Bethlehem, was on the west side of the Dead Sea, the land of Moab was on the eastern shore of it, a well-watered and fertile highlands. Elimelech must have been driven to Moab by dire economic need. While in Moab, Elimelech and Naomi had two sons, Mahlon and Chilion, who, sometime after the death of their father, married two Moabite girls, Ruth and Orpah.

The Book of Ruth opens with Naomi newly bereft of her sons. In five short verses we see a significant change in Naomi. Her name in Hebrew means "my pleasantness" and, given the devotion of her two Moabitess daughters-in-law, we may assume that her name was indicative of her personality. But now, an outsider in a traditionally unfriendly land, having lost her husband and two sons, Naomi is bitter — and how could we blame her? First, famine drove her from her homeland to become a sojourner in a traditionally unfriendly land. Then she lost her husband and two sons.

Having learned that conditions in Israel were now improved, Naomi is determined to return to Bethlehem. When Ruth and Orpah insist that they accompany her, she says bitterly, "Turn back, my daughters, why will you go with me? Have I yet sons in my womb that they may become your husbands?" (1:11). Her words contrast sharply with the affectionate responses and sense of responsibility with which Orpah and Ruth respond. They were from Moab, but they were nevertheless good people.

A Stranger In Bethlehem

Eventually, Orpah returns to her parental home in Moab, but Ruth refuses to be dissuaded and accompanies Naomi to her ancestral home. Now the roles are reversed because, while Naomi was an Israelite sojourner in Moab, now it will be her Moabitess daughter-in-law, Ruth, who will be the stranger in Bethlehem. Naomi was instantly recognized by her Bethlehem friends and neighbors. "Is this Naomi?" they ask.

But she sets them straight: "Do not call me Naomi, call me Mara ("bitter"), for the Almighty had dealt very bitterly with me. I went away full and the Lord has brought me back empty" (1:20,21). While we can understand the emotions behind this bitter outburst, we know that Naomi is wrong. She has not returned empty to Bethlehem. With loyal and loving Ruth, Naomi is not and will not be "empty."

Many of us, perhaps like Naomi, have suffered one reversal or loss after another and come to the conclusion that God has made us or allowed us to become "empty." Often, it is only then that we discover that he has not left us empty but with a fullness that only grace can deliver and faith can receive.

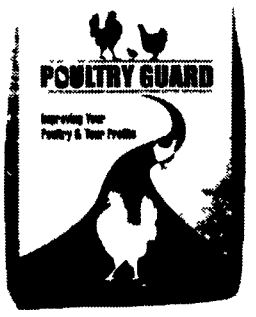
Unlike these other treatments, Poultry Guard Litter Amendment is easy and convenient to apply and needs no incorporation or activation Fewer application variables mean more consistent performance In addition, Poultry Guard can be applied up to five days before bird set, whenever it's convenient for the grower



Using Poultry Guard Litter Amendment Is As Simple As...

Apply

- No incorporation
- No moisture activation
- No complicated instructions for heating and ventilation in conjunction with application

Bird Set
Poultry Guard can be applied when it's most convenient, up to five days before bird set
- No application timing headaches between clean out and bird set
- No last minute application after equipment has been lowered

Control Ammonia
Poultry Guard will deliver immediate and long-term ammonia control and give birds a healthier growing environment.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State

Jan. 25, 2002

Market Unchanged

- Cheese prices hold steady.
- Butter down slightly.
- Preliminary analysis of a butter/powder tilt.

Not much changed this week at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Barrel prices remained unchanged at $1.35 per pound, blocks down half a penny to $1.3850 per pound, and Grade AA butter down 2.25 cents to $1.3175 per pound.

USDA reports that the butter market is weak. Churning schedules are seasonally active, there is plenty of milk and cream available, and stocks at the end of December 2001 were twice what they were a year earlier. Part of the problem with the buildup in stocks was the unusually high price of butter for most of 2001. The other problem was imports were significant. Final numbers from USDA for 2001 indicate that licensed butter imports totaled 15.0 million pounds, just shy of the 15.4 million pound quota.

Imports of high-tier butter (over quota butter), which is subject to a high tariff (import tax), were 26.1 million pounds for 2001. Given that over-quota butter imports in 2000 were just 272,128 pounds, this represents an increase of 9,478 percent (is my math wrong here??).

The market for nonfat dry milk continues to be weak. Prices for Extra Grade and Grade A nonfat dry milk was mostly $0.90-$0.9250 per pound in the West. This is very close to the USDA support price of $0.90 per pound. As a result, nonfat dry milk continues to move into the support price program.

Since Oct. 1 2001, approximately 126.3 million pounds of nonfat dry milk have entered the dairy price support program. Uncommitted inventories total 738.1 million pounds. That compares to a total of 406.1 million pounds a year ago. There are rumors that USDA is going to readjust the butter/powder tilt.

What impact will a reduction in the support price for nonfat dry milk have on milk prices? A reduction in the support price from $0.90 to $0.80 per pound will result in a reduction in the western price of powder. I am "guestimating" that western powder prices will decline from an average price of $0.9125 per pound to about $0.85 per pound. At that price, more nonfat dry milk will end up in the cheese vat. It is possible that the western price of nonfat dry milk could also fall all the way to $0.81 per pound.

A reduction in the wholesale price of nonfat dry milk will directly reduce both Class II and IV prices, which depend on the NASS survey price of nonfat dry milk. It will also knock some of the wind out of the "higher of" that determines Class I milk prices. My initial estimate is that the Class IV price will drop by $0.47 per CWT. I didn't estimate what impact this would have on cheese prices. For the Northeast federal order, which is about 40 percent Class I, this will reduce the uniform price by about $0.18 per CWT. The drop could be higher if one assumes the western price of nonfat dry milk falls below $0.85 per pound.

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

On the national level, said Moore, a 40-year low in interest rates, low increase in consumer prices, low oil prices, and a rebounding stock market combine to point in the direction to the end of the recession, perhaps in March, "although many people will not recognize it then," he said.

In the ag economy, exports are sluggish except for beef, since disease problems overseas put American beef in demand.

The average live weight of beef animals has increased, aided by the cheap feed available and high prices of feeders. He expects that the number of cattle on feed will drop significantly in the next several months.

Moore is positive about the future prices of the beef industry, as beef production is decreasing, driving prices up.

However "Our market is attractive, so we've sucked cattle in as imports," he said. "Everywhere that people have things to sell, they want to sell it to the U.S. The high dollar value helps, since it costs more for them to sell to us than us to them."

In future years, however, Moore does see poultry taking over more of the total meat supply.

Also, the number of hog operations is increasing, a trend that is accelerating rather than stabilizing, according to Moore. "The hog industry has rapidly gone the way the chicken industry did," he said.

Of the $46.4 billion total farm income, $22.9 is government payments, he said. Fortunately, "Consumers know that food is cheap and to keep it that way we need the farm program," he said.

As a whole, America has experienced several prosperous production years, and "it usually takes a few mediocre years to drive the prices up," he said.

Survey Results

Chet Hughes, Penn State extension livestock agent, presented the results of a survey completed through the BQA program.

The report was compiled from 123 responses from feedlot operators.

The average one-time capacity of the feedlots was 248, with an average of 411 marketed annually. Thirty-two percent market their cattle through the auction only, 18 percent of the operators market their cattle direct only, and 34 percent use both avenues.

The target weight for finished cattle separated into two groups, according to Hughes, with a high average of 1,307 pounds and a low average of 1,268 pounds.

Of the producers who responded, 45.5 knew the health history on the majority of feeders they purchased.

Sixty percent of the cattle came directly off of the farm and 32 percent of feedlot cattle came from the sale barn.

Individually identifying animals is important for gaining carcass data, genetic information, and tracebacks for animal health reasons, said Hughes. Thirty-two percent of producers said that identify their cattle individually.

Forty two percent of respondents keep written treatment records. In other bookkeeping, 33 percent calculated the rate of gain for their cattle. Thirty-nine percent have participated in a BQA training workshop

Of the responses, 33 percent do not use implants. Eighty-seven percent inject implants in the correct area, the middle third of the ear, and 13 percent in the base. Also, 80 percent of the respondents said that they gave injections in the neck, the correct area for injections.

Seventy-three percent of respondents followed approved nutrient management plans.

Forty-seven percent used TMR mixers equipped with a scales, a fact that may become important if they are considering custom feeding, said Hughes. Forty-four percent of respondents said that they would consider custom feeding.

Custom Feeding

John Comerford, Penn State extension beef specialist, addressed custom feeding.

Custom feeding helps to manage risk, since the feedlot operator does not own the cattle. If the barn capacity is greater than a producer's budget, custom feeding would make more efficient use of the facilites.

Producers need cattle feeding expertise, the facilities to feed and handle cattle, and scales for cattle feed, he said. A custom feeder must also keep excellent records and have the a support team of a veterinarian and nutritionist for feed formulation.

Producers should also consider how to develop a contract, since "nothing is free, from the silo to the unloader to the bunk, and you have to incorporate that into a pricing scenario," he said.

In addition, "Your risks are defined by the contract you have with the customer. It is a written, signed legal document. It is important to look at is as a business situation."

Sam Comstock, University of Vermont extension livestock specialist, presented his ideas about opportunities for Pennsylvania producers and their northern counterparts.

In New England, an alliance-type program helps bring owners together and fill loads, he said. Since the calf prices is 10-15 percent below Mid-from indigenous cattle found in the Kerry area of Ireland. A mountain breed, they roamed almost wild over the Irish hillsides.

World's Smallest Breed

Dexter breeding began in the 1820s, a registry began in 1879, and an organization quickly followed by a registry in England in 1892. The breed as brought to America in 1912 and Canada in the 1960s. and numbered more than 200 head.

The Dexter was an ideal homestead cow and provided meat, milk, and power. However Dexter numbers decreased to approximately 5,000 in the world. Today the numbers have risen to approximately 12,000 head worldwide, with 4,000-5,000 in North America. The ADCA has about 400 members and registered 613 cattle in 1997.

A dual-purpose breed, cows mature at 650-850 pounds and bulls at 800-1,000 pounds. Usually black, they may also be dun or red, the most rare color. The cattle must be a solid color, with only a few white markings, to be considered for the registry.

In the show ring, judges prefer a height between 38 and 42 inches at the withers for cows, and bulls to be proportionally larger.

There are now polled bloodlines available in the traditionally-horned breed. These animals are becoming more popular now that the registry allows polled animals.

They are rugged, easy-keeping, and are known for their calving ease and good maternity traits.

More information is available on the web at Dextercattle.org.

Windswept Acre

Clayton Harrington, Quarryville, has kept a few head of the cattle on his farm, Windswept Acre, for 21 years.

Harrington took agriculture classes in school and worked on a dairy farm in his youth, which lent to his interest in cattle. He is joined by his wife, Beverly, and sons Shawn, 18; Travis, 17; and Michael, 14.

After reading about the animals in magazines, his interest was piqued, but actually finding the animals took a bit of detective work.

"One year at the Solanco Fair I saw a bull in the petting zoo and thought, 'He looks like a Dexter,'" he said. This intensified his interest and led him to follow through on an advertisement he saw in Lancaster Farming. Eventually he purchased a bull "probably as big around as he was tall," and a few heifers and now, 21 years later, generally keeps four cows, often with calves at their side, and a bull on the farm.

He has since bought cattle from breeders in Ohio and New Jersey and continues to breed his own animals. Good conformation, easy maintenance and correct proportion are factors Harrington considers in making breeding decisions.

"They are known for gentleness and easy calving so I want to help keep that, too," he said.

"I just enjoy having them," he said. "It's one of those things that just gets in your blood." Since they are a rare breed, Harrington is also interested in helping to preserve the bloodline.

Although in America the cattle are used for novelty-sized oxen and petting zoo recruits, there is a national show and meeting conducted in June. Besides producing lean beef, the cows can produce at upward of 2-3 gallons of milk at 4 percent butterfat.

In the U.S., most breeders prefer the beef cows. In England a few herds are kept for strictly milk, Harrington said.

Harrington equates the Dexter's conformation to be "like a Shorthorn, a dual-purpose animal," he said. "They should have both milk and beef traits but not one extreme or the other."

"There's still a lot of variation in the breed," he said. "I have a picture in my head of what I want — proportionate, in the middle of the road."

He has found the Dexter breed to be generally healthy. The veterinarian comes to the farm for AI and to vaccinate for brucellosis — usually the only time the cattle warrant a veterinary visit, he said. The cattle winter just like any other beef breed.

With the addition of a rented pasture nearby, he hopes to expand the cow herd "to spread the cost of the bull around and add income," he said. "I can also do a little more improving by being more selective with breeding."

Harrington has sent cattle to Australia, when the country bought a load of cattle. He later received a letter from Australia describing how one of his cattle took second place in a stock show, and later a bull calf from that heifer took first. When the cattle were taken to Australia, employees from the export station called them to inquire about purchasing Dexter cattle.

Clayton Harrington, Quarryville, stands with his bull in the foreground. Harrington has raised Irish Dexter cattle for 21 years.

The Powells chose the breed because they can flourish on small acreage and are mild-mannered, a good match for their two sons.

Penny Meadows Farm

Richard and Sue Powell, Penny Meadows Farm, Bainbridge, bought their first three head of Irish Dexter cattle six years ago.

They were interested in owning a few head of cattle and because of their sons, William, 14, and Colin, 12, wanted the animals be mild-mannered. Irish Dexter cattle were an easy choice.

"They have a very nice temperament," said Sue. "The cattle know their names and when they're out in the pasture, all you have to do is call for them."

Not only their gentle temperament but also their easy-keeping trait attracted Powell to the breed.

"They're ideal for small acreage," he said.

The animals "were kept by poor Irish families and they (the cattle) had to do with almost nothing," he said. "They still do well on marginal feed."

In England, "a lot of them are kept for double suckling," he said. "They have a lot of milk, so if the owners don't want to milk the animals, they can just stick another calf on cow."

Many of America's Dexters are more of the beef variety. On the other hand in England they are "much more dual-purpose," Richard said.

Richard, who is originally from England, not only exhibits dogs but also judges shows. He was judging a show in England when friends took him home for a visit. They introduced him to the breed when they showed him a herd of 50 head.

"They were beautiful little cattle that were friendly and inquisitive and raced up to see us," he said. Later, after he finished judging a dog show in England that also featured an agricultural show, he raced over to if there were any Dexters at the cattle show.

"At that point, I was hooked," he said.

After visiting several breeders, Richard also found the Dexter cattle he was looking for from an advertisement in Lancaster Farming.

Besides the three colors, there are also two leg types in the breed, said Richard. Whether an animal is considered short-legged or long-legged is "determined mostly by the cannon bone but also in the walk," he said. "You can tell by the back legs when they walk."

Determining whether an animal is short- or long-legged is a rather objective decision, and Dexter breeders are divided about establishing an industry-wide standard.

The long-legged animals are "small but normal," he said.

"They're miniature but everything is in proportion," said Sue. "There's nothing dwarfish about them."

Short-legged cows carry the short-legged gene, which may pose a problem when they are bred to a short-legged bull. The result is a 20 percent chance of the calf having a genetic condition called achondroplasia.

These "bulldog" calves are deformed and dwarfish-looking and cannot live. This can be avoided by breeding the short-legged cattle with a long-legged mate.

"This way you will get both leg types but avoid a bulldog," he said.

In 1998 Richard, who is originally from England, attended the First World Congress on Dexter Cattle, conducted at the Royal Agricultural College in Cirencester, England.

In addition, last year he attended the national show and meeting, an event which moves to different locations across the country each year. Last year Cobleskill, N.Y., hosted the event.

Irish Dexter shows are virtually unknown here in the East, said Richard. California and Missouri state fairs, however, host the shows. The last time a show was in the East was when New York hosted the national show. Video shows have provided an outlet to show cattle for exhibitors who live in the East.

The cattle can be crossed with other breeds. For example Dexters are used by owners who want to get a small calf for first-calf heifers. The Powells use AI to allow them flexibility in choosing a different bull for each breeding.

In addition the Powells have 14 acres, half in pasture and half in hay for the cattle.

After deciding on the Dexters, they bought Jersey cattle to learn about cattle handling. They originally purchased two Jersey cattle "to see if we liked having them," said Richard.

cording to fundamental marketing models, noted Davis.

"Corn is fundamentally way too cheap," he said.

Trendline corn yields for 2002 are projected at 140 bushels per acre, based on normal conditions.

Even so, "corn supplies are tight enough" Davis said, noting that China is now finished liquidating its inventory and the U.S. is holding a relatively low amount of carryover corn.

One of the reasons for sluggish prices has been the rela-western prices but the slaughter prices are higher, "retained ownership helps to get around the 10-15 percent less and take advantage of the higher slaughter prices," he said.

In the retained ownership programs, the calves are preconditioned, gathered, checked by the veterinarian, and shipped to the feedlot, where they are fed and then slaughtered as a group. Feedlot and carcass data is collected and then costs are traced by the individual animal. The owners are billed at the close.

A custom feeding operation should have a single designated contact. "It's very valuable to use to get quick feedback on what's going on down there," he said.

"What it really comes down to is management — to the fact that we're hours away and need to have confidence in you," he said.

Karl Hess, Lancaster, feedlot operator, presented his experience with custom cattle feeding. Hess operates a farm that has been in his family for many years and wanted to avoid expanding the barns yet "make it as efficient as possible in continuing to feed cattle," he said. "custom feeding is one of the ways we've done that."

Hess has a smaller facility besides the main barn for bringing new cattle on the farm before they are put in the larger area. A portable chute to load off an on for either barn is also helpful.

He has the schematics of his barn and cattle laid out for a helpful reference to who owns what cattle, what pen they're in, and what rations they are getting.

"The primary reason I got into custom feeding was I looked at my interest in cattle feeding 6-8 years ago. I decided I didn't have enough confidence in myself as a feeder cattle buyer, and this was a way to get around that," he said.

Also Paul Slayton, executive director of the Pennsylvania Beef Council (PBC), gave an update on the promotional efforts of the PBC.

Of the checkoff dollars not sent back to their state of origin and not sent to the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, PBC had $435,500 to use for state programs. This was supplemented by outside national contracts such as the American Veal Association.

Sampling at the Farm Show and consumer shows in Philadelphia was in addition to the information handed out at a women's nutrition event. Also seminars that focused on either producers or foodservice professionals were conducted throughout the year.

More than 400 producers were BQA certified through the educational sessions that began in the summer.

Steve Van Lannen, vice president of cattle production systems, introduced Smithfield Beef Enterprises to producers.

Lynn Kime, Penn State extension ag economic development agent, gave producers an overview of the risk management strategy of crop insurance.

According to Kime sales closing dates for crop insurance is March 15 for spring seeded crops and July 31 for forage seedlings.

Also during the evening, Secretary Hayes was presented with a large fruit basket from incoming Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association President, Barron "Boots" Hetherington, Ringtown, and outgoing president Brooks Way, Port Matilda.

has changed its focus from promotion to lobbying to increase consumption and encourage peach production through legislation, said Lott.

Bill Gardenour, president of the Maryland State Horticulture Society, represented his organization at the dinner.

Several awards were given out during the evening.

The 2001 Outstanding Grower Award is the highest honor given by the State Horticulture Association of Pennsylvania each year.

This year the honor went to Henry and Mary Therese (Torrie), Boyertown, owners of a family-owned orchard, Frecon Fruit Farm, Inc., and a retail store, Frecon Orchard Outlet.

The operation is a channel for fruit information and activities and a leader in the development and marketing of unique varieties of apples, peaches, and white and yellow nectarines.

The Frecons operate just under 200 acres of trees. Their season starts with sweet and tart cherries before they move into peach season, which they are well known for. They have been instrumental in growing and marketing the new "Saturn" peach.

The Frecons were one of the first growers in the eastern U.S. to grow and market the now-widespread Gala apple. They cultivate approximately 20 varieties of apples.

"We try to promote new varieties," said Torrie, noting that she has on many occasions handed out samples of those unique varieties for customers to taste.

The Frecons were also one of the first in the region to use the Belgian fence method of growing fruit, which allows maximum production on limited acreage with extensive pruning and spraying techniques, according to Torrie.

The couple has four children. In addition other family members work on the farm, including founder Richard Frecon, senior, Richard Frecon, junior, and Therese Frecon. The family also operates a fruit packaging supply company.

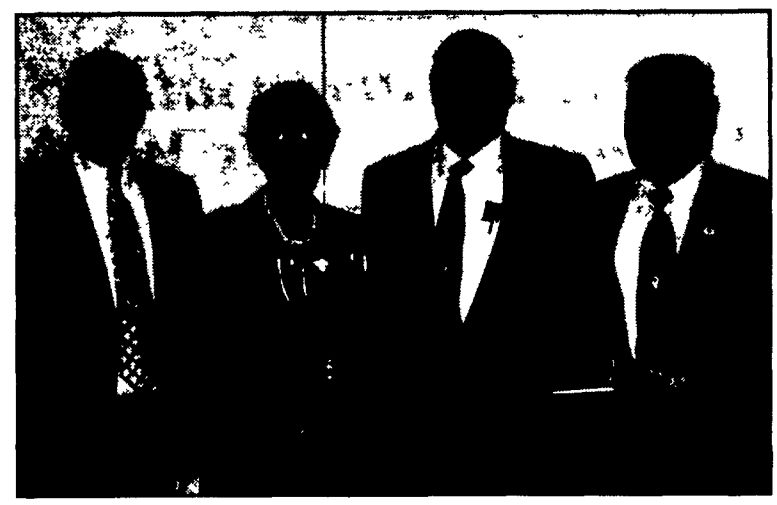
The third annual award from the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association went to Boyd Mertz, who has played an active leadership role in the association for nearly 40 years. Known for his meticulous recordkeeping, Boyd took on the family's greenhouse business in 1960.

For many years he wholesaled much of his tomato crop to New Jersey farm markets.

Over the years he has added plastic greenhouses, converted to soilless media tough culture, and began using fogging and later bio-pest controls and bumble pollination. Mertz worked closely with Penn State extension agents and other industry experts to stay current with industry developments.

(Turn to Page A29)

Katie Stahl, 19, Gettysburg, is Pennsylvania's 2002 Apple Queen.



Wilma, Dwight, and Jack Mickey, Chambersburg, were honored for their bushel of apples and market stand. Their exhibits took overall best of show and a first place at the Farm Show. Glenn Shaw, left, president of the state horticulture association of Pennsylvania, presented the award.

Va. Farm Show Draws Bigger Crowds Than Ever Before

GAY BROWNLEE
Virginia Correspondent

FISHERSVILLE (Augusta Co., Va.) — If the crowds at Expoland that rolled into the Virginia Farm Show in extended cab pickups, vans, cars (and even the occasional bus) are a gauge of success, then the decision to relocate the 2002 event smack dab into Shenandoah Valley farm country from Richmond was a good one.

When the sky, moreover, resembles a sea of blue crystal and temperatures are hanging in the mid-50s, what fellow doesn't enjoy time off from the farm to be out and about where he, or she, can converse with friends and neighbors?

Could be that while he's chewing the fat, the same person may encounter a better way of doing things than what he's been accustomed to. Could be when he returns home that night, a fresh perspective will be rattling around in his head that his routine day after day at the homestead could stand a bit of an upgrade.

While turkey, beef, and hay farmer Rick Shiflet from Swoope, Va. was examining a skid loader in a heated tent for exhibitors, men, women, teen-agers and kids carrying flat green yardsticks or solid square ones were in the aisles ambling by him.

Impressed with the skid loaders capabilities and safety features, Shiflet learned it had 59 hp and said to Charles Props and Jeff Selkirk that the first skid loader he owned had only 23 hp. Shiflet, nevertheless, was closely scrutinizing the machine for ideas about possible modifications on equipment he already has.

"I keep looking at how things keep getting bigger for us to do our job, and with that the price tag gets bigger," Shiflet said.

Richard and Pamela Beasley believe a farm show definitely is beneficial. Last year, for instance, the event they attended in Richmond was how they were brought into contact with feed dealers and, ultimately, decided from which they would make seed purchases for their farm near Fredericksburg.

"This (2002 show) is more livestock oriented than Richmond," said Pamela. "This is a more agricultural area."

She said on 250 acres, she and her husband raise 200 top weight hogs, some beef and sheep, along with soybeans which they grow for a cash crop on 100 acres.

While in the valley, they also were getting a feel for the availability of local farmland, they said, identifying their present location in Spotsylvania County as midway between Washington, D. C. and Richmond.

Unfortunately, they see the tentacles of development approaching much too rapidly and that is a definite concern for the couple.

"The biggest thing we fight," Pamela said, "is tax to keep it."

About the farm show, however, she commented lightly: "Farmers come to see the farmers. Men socialize."

Larry Allen, Danny Glenn, and William Womack had no idea they were confirming Beasley's observation by acknowledging how happy they were to be taking off a day from work and not minding the two hour drive from Prospect. Seeing equipment and people all in one spot was the bonus.

Filing around the gold, green, and blue maze of painted machinery, 14-year old chums, Joel Darrin Martin, Josh Helmuth and Sherman Showalter obviously were in their element having the farm show practically in their backyards. They all lived on farms near Bridgewater.

"I love looking at John Deeres," said someone in the trio.

Showalter predicted of the show: "It'll definitely get bigger," but his attention was on a John Deere demonstration with a child-sized tractor.

The popular outdoor timber demonstrations at the Virginia Farm Show drew numerous spectators who wanted to see, indeed, how such machinery could be operated by one man.

Lewis and Fran White of Staunton have no links to farming, but since they read about it in the local newspaper, the farm show seemed like a great place for them to discuss gardening with farmers. Besides, the location was but a few miles from the retirement home they moved into six-months ago when they left Gaithersburg, Md.

Her flower beds already are shaping up, she said, but Fran wants to start growing vegetables, too.

Although for the present he is limited and can only dabble in farming, social services professional Ernest Newton of Richmond found Expoland the ideal site for the Virginia Farm Show.

"This is the practical place to hold it," he said.

For a person such as himself, who knows farming is what he wants to do in the future, Newton was assimilating knowledge and facts, particularly about harvesting timber when he shortly retires. With that dream in mind, he began growing trees some time earlier.

Log-cutting demonstrations unfailingly fascinate Newton, he said, so in the brisk but sunny breeze and fresh sawdust whipping around the premises, generally, he was standing at leisure near a station where one or another of the various timbering exhibitors were showing the workings of his particular kind of equipment to interested parties.

Officials said 126 exhibitors were on tap and attendance on the first day alone was high enough to exceed that of both days at its previous venue of the Virginia Farm Show.

Joel Darrin Martin, Josh Helmuth, and Sherman Showalter, all 14 and from Bridgewater area farm families, not only were enjoying the entire event, but debating between their favorite maker of tractors.

With their daughters Jessica and little Amber, Richard and Pamela Beasley from Fredericksburg, Va., attended the Virginia Farm Show to collect information and to have fun. Their farm — a hog, beef, sheep and soybean operation — is vulnerable, being located between outgrowth from Washington D.C. and Richmond.

Ernest Newton from Richmond, Va. seen at right, says timber-cutting demonstrations such as those at the Virginia Farm Show always appeal to him. With Augusta Medical Center in the sunny background, exhibitor Mike Eichenberger from Indianapolis, Ind. is also seen chatting with John Morris, Esmont, Va.

tively low price of wheat, which becomes a competitor to corn when wheat is selling for less than about $0.75 per bushel higher than corn, Davis said.

"Wheat is sitting on top of (corn)," he said.

One factor that may influence corn prices in the near future is the possibility of corn from Argentina not entering the global market because of that country's recent economic chaos.

"We're not banking on that, but keeping an eye on it," Davis said.

A projected rapid increase in ethanol production from corn in the U.S. over the next five years could boost the market, though Davis noted that some ethanol investors are wary of tight corn supplies,

"Ethanol buyers are a little nervous that we're going to have a crop problem," he said.

For corn to break out of its slump, more of the crop will have to be shipped out of the country, according to Davis.

"Traders need export markets to perk up. (They need) something to excite them."

He urged producers to spread out their risks by using futures options and reducing storage costs.

"Don't try to hit home runs," Davis said, urging producers to cash in on modest gains when available rather than holding out for one big sale.

Historically, corn prices have never been at a yearly low during the months of March through May. Prices tend to bottom out between July and December, according to data from the last 20 years cited by Davis.

Predicting peaks in corn prices from historical models is more difficult, because highs have tended to be scattered through the year "like a shotgun," he said.

National corn acreage will be critical this year, Davis said. Given excellent planting conditions, a possible two to three million more acres than expected can go for corn.

Pennsylvania growers, however, are working in a somewhat isolated market because corn grown here is used locally rather than for export, Davis pointed out.

As with corn, soybean highs are also "hard to hit" because history shows no real pattern. The lowest prices, however, tend to come around harvest time.

Based on that, corn and soybean producers need to focus on avoiding the lows and getting reasonably good returns rather than gambling on hitting the highest prices, according to Davis.

While soybeans, like corn, are priced lower than marketing models suggest, the normal trading range for soybeans is about $1 over the course of a year, giving growers an opportunity for good returns if they can sell on the higher side of that range as well as taking advantage of federal program loan payments.

When it comes to forward trading of soybeans, grower options are limited, Davis noted.

"Don't get carried away forward-pricing beans," he said.

With worldwide soybean consumption growing considerably, countries such as Brazil — with cheap labor, plenty of land, and a favorable climate — are stepping up to meet that demand and proving to be a major competitor.

Stagnant grain markets will likely not continue as they have been the last several years, according to Davis.

At some point, "We're going to go back into a period of volatility," he said.

Meanwhile, economic development leaders from the region are gearing up for ethanol production and looking into the possibility of producing biodiesel fuel from soybeans.

Ed Stahl of the Garden State Ethanol Board briefed the group on plans for a facility in southern New Jersey that would turn 11 to 14 million bushels of corn per year into ethanol, dried distillers grains, and carbon dioxide.

The group hopes to begin construction by the end of this year and be in producion by the end of 2003, Stahl said.

With the majority of existing ethanol production occurring in midwestern states, proposing to do it in New Jersey is "thinking outside of the box," Stahl said.

While some of the corn used in the plant would likely need to be shipped in from outside the region, Stahl said the project would benefit area grower/investors.

A feasibility study initiated by York County ag and economic development leaders is under way for a similar project in Pennsylvania. Nine counties in the southcentral part of the state are being considered for a possible ethanol facility. A preliminary feasibility study on biodiesel production in the region is also in progress.

With the region still in the grip of a major water deficit, weather indicators for 2002 are showing a "normal" pattern for the growing season, according to Paul Deanno, weather reporter for KYW-TV, Philadelphia.

While "normal" means an average based on weather conditions over the last 30 years, normal conditions only occur about 20 percent of the time, Deanno said.

The outlook is based on the fact that the national Climate Prediction Center has observed "no strong steering signs" to indicate weather deviations throughout the growing season.

For the short term — through mid-February — Deanno predicted temperatures to remain above normal with the likelihood of above-normal precipitation.

"This will go down as one of the mildest winters we have ever seen," he said.

The warm temperatures are the result of the region being on the "backside" of a large jetstream trough which is trapping cold air to the north and allowing the southern jet stream to flow much farther north than usual.

Predictions for late 2002 and beyond take into consideration two issues: global warming and the return of an "El Nino" weather pattern.

While forecasters are predicting El Nino's unusually warm waters in the eastern Pacific Ocean to return this fall, Deanno pointed out that the Northeast is affected less than the rest of the U.S. by the "wrench it throws into normal climate patterns."

With the exception of producing another mild winter next year, El Nino would have little effect on Pennsylvania weather, he said.

In regard to global warming, the debate is not over whether it is happening or not, according to Deanno. If glaciers in Glacier National Park, Montana, continue to melt according to current warming trends, they will be gone by 2030.

"It is happening," he said.

Long-range effects of global warming include increases in droughts and floods. Optimal crop growing areas will shift farther north and irrigation/water rights issues will become much more important, Deanno said.

Scott Davis, ag market analyst from Iowa, shares strategies to help grain producers spread their risk.

Convention Honors

After serving as president of the association, he was elected secretary-treasurer in 1971, an office which he held for 30 years until his recent retirement. He also served on the executive committee.

With the award Mertz was also given lifetime membership in the association.

The Distinguished Individual Recognition Award went to Knouse Foods Cooperative, Inc., Peach Glen.

The award was presented to Dean Carey, president emeritus, and Ken Guise, president and CEO of Knouse Foods. Phillip Baugher presented the award.

Through voluntary grower assessment with matching cooperative contributions, Knouse Foods and its members have provided more than $500,000 in research grants since 1986.

"Knouse Foods has been a strong supporter of industry-funded research from its inception," said Baugher, chairman of the Horticultural Association Research Committee.

"Mr. Carey was instrumental in the establishment of this program, and the continued support of Ken Guise, the Knouse Foods board of directors, and the grower members will provide a firm foundation for moving the fruit industry forward into the future."

Knouse Foods is a grower-owned cooperative with its corporate headquarters in Peach Glen. Operating seven processing plants in three states, the company markets more than 350 products, best known under the Lucky Leaf and Musselman brands.

Other recognition included honoring the Mickey family — Jack, Wilma, and Dwight — for their Farm Show winnings. The Mickeys took home best bushel of the year overall at the competition. Their roadside market also took home a first place.

"I'm very pleased. This is a high point with our orchard and career. Last year had its challenges, but we are starting 2002 out on a very high note," said Dwight.

The family operates 40 acres of fruit and 10 acres of vegetables in the Chambersburg area. The family has grown and sold produce since Dwight's grandparents began the business in 1933, an operation still named Shatzer Fruit Market.

New Farmers, New Generation

Marion Bowlan

Pennsylvania Farm Link

A New Hope

I was once accused of trying to build a program for new farmers based only on hope. My reply, of course, was that hope was not enough, but I believe that hope is as vital to new farmers as spring is to a new year.

Offering hope to young people who want to start out in production agriculture seems to scoff at current conventional wisdom. To many, the only way to get into farming is either to marry into it or inherit it. Without a lot of financial help, entry into farming seems hopeless. And every new census underscores the continuing steep drop in new farmer entry. The latest census reveals that there are three times as many farmers age 65 or older as those who are under 35.

While the costs of land, machinery, regulation, and just doing business keep rising, profit margins continue to slip. Many wonder why anyone would want to invest so much for the privilege of working outdoors in drought, snow, and mud to earn a modest living with no paid vacation or health benefits.

However, there still is a resilient group who are finding ways to make farming work and who remain hopeful.

Is there a cookbook recipe for their success? Not really, but these farmers exhibit the following characteristics:

- They work to reduce costs and increase profits while protecting the natural environment and supporting their local communities. In other words, their focus is on working with nature rather than against it.
- They focus on value rather than cost and try to tailor their products to the unique needs and preferences of their customers, instead of trying to fit the customer to their product.
- They market in the niches, they direct market their product using everything from the Internet to word of mouth to advertise their services.
- They focus on what they do best, capitalizing on their unique skills and abilities. They find markets for the crops or livestock they want to grow and are able to grow well rather than produce for markets where they have difficulty competing.
- Last of all, they focus on creating value through their uniqueness.

Want to learn more about these new farmers, new opportunities, and hope for the future of farming? The eighth annual New and Beginning Farmer Workshop sponsored by Pennsylvania Farm Link will highlight these strategies, including adding value to raw farm products, related but side-line ventures such as farm tours, and capitalizing on the skills and abilities you have.

Participants will also receive a healthy dose of practical knowledge and advice on how to: convince your banker you have what it takes, protect your land and water resources, safeguard your investment through crop insurance, develop a marketing plan, scout out market leads, and conduct a hands-on walk through your business plan. The workshop will be Feb. 16 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Holiday Inn in Grantville at a cost of $30 per person, $50 per couple, or $20 per student. For more information or to register, call Pa. Farm Link at (717) 664-7077 or e-mail us at pafarmlink@redrose.net.

Next month, look for information in this column on the crucial family issues to address in a farm transfer.

Bowlan is a third generation farmer from Lancaster County who heads the Pennsylvania Farm Link Program and works with beginning and retiring farmers on farm transfers to the next generation.

DAIRY FARMS MAY BE IMPACTED BY NUTRIENT MANAGEMENT CHANGES

Gerald Martin
Extension Agent — Nutrient Management

Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Law and regulations require nitrogen-based nutrient management planning. However, phosphorus-based nutrient management planning will soon become reality in Pennsylvania. This article will summarize the regulatory developments in process and briefly consider how they may impact Pennsylvania dairy farms.

Gerald Martin

In March 1999, the "USDA-EPA Unified National Strategy for Animal Feeding Operations" was published as part of Clinton-Gore Clean Water Action Plan. A key aspect of the strategy was the requirement that nutrient management planning address both nitrogen and phosphorus. EPA was required to revise the existing regulations for Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations (CAFOs). USDA was required to revise each state's Nutrient Management Practice Standard (590). Both of these efforts are required to address phosphorus in nutrient management planning requirements.

Three options were provided to address phosphorus. It is important to understand the three options, because the potential impact to agriculture varies considerably between them.

Phosphorus-based planning has two impacts:

1. More land is required to apply manure .

2. Crop nitrogen needs will not be met with manure, which may require the purchase of commercial fertilizer.

What is the status of phosphorus-based planning in Pennsylvania?

The final CAFO regulations will be published in January 2003. These regulations will initially affect larger dairy operations that meet yet-to-be-determined CAFO criteria. The new Pennsylvania Nutrient Management Standard 590 was released in May 2001. Most importantly, it designates the "Phosphorus Index" as the method of planning nutrient applications. This will affect operations that use Natural Resources Conservation Service technical services or cost-share money. The Pennsylvania Nutrient Management Advisory Board is considering the adoption of the Phosphorus Index process and revision of Act 6 to incorporate that process into program requirements.

The Phosphorus Index was selected from three options or approaches. Each option and typical impact on manure application rates are described here.

- Phosphorus Index option: P application rates are based on identification of critical source areas using an evaluation of several factors that measure the potential of phosphorus runoff. Research has shown that approximately 90 percent of phosphorus loss occurs from 10 percent of the land area. The Phosphorus Index is used to identify these areas by assigning risk levels. Because manure application is restricted on a small percentage of fields, this option typically has less impact on a livestock operation when compared to the two remaining options.
- Soil Test Phosphorus option: P application rates are based on soil test interpretation (low, optimum, high, or excessive) and crop removal as shown below. Approximately, 74 percent of soils tested in Penn State's laboratory test optimum or higher, making this option extremely restrictive on most dairy farms that have a history of frequent manure application.
- Soil Phosphorus Threshold option: P application rates are based on soil test levels that reflect a loading rate or environmental threshold of the primary soil type. Because this threshold is not as low as the agronomic level, this option would not be as restrictive.

The future, with respect to the type and extent of phosphorus-based nutrient management planning, remains unclear at this point. However, it is important for dairy producers to become familiar with and prepare for potential regulatory changes.

The next article will consider how dairy producers can respond to increasing environmental challenges.

Delmarva Ag Expo Set

SALISBURY, Md. — Soybean growers attending the 2002 Delmarva Ag Expo will get a first-hand report on the competition from Brazilian soybean exports from an American soybean grower.

Ron Heck, a producer from Perry, Iowa, and a vice president of the American Soybean Association (ASA) who has visited the Brazilian soybean growing areas several times in the past couple of years, will talk about "Brazilian Soybean Production: Perceived or Real Threat?" at 3 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 13, at the Ag Expo in Salisbury, Md. The session is open to all growers attending the expo.

Heck farms an average annual soybean acreage of 1,800 acres and 1,800 acres of corn.

Following the presentation, Heck will be a guest at the Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association's (MASA) reception and meeting from 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m., according to Jonathon Quinn of Warwick, Md., president of MASA. MASA includes soybean growers from Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey.

Joe Layton Jr. of Lazy Day Farms near Vienna, Md., also will be recognized at the reception. He was recently recognized as the soybean winner in the best managed farms content co-sponsored by the Farm Progress Companies and the American Soybean Association.

All growers, both members and nonmembers, are welcome to attend the presentation on the Brazilian soybean situation and the reception and meeting that follows. The meeting will involve the election of new board members for the MASA and future plans.

In addition to being a member of ASA's Executive Committee, Heck is on the Chicago Reserve Board Advisory Committee for Agriculture, Labor and Small Business, and serves on the USDA and Department of Energy's Biomass Research and Development Technical Advisory Committee. He also served on the Iowa Farm Bill Study Team from 1993-95. Heck served on the National Biodiesel Board for three years and on the Iowa State University Precision Farming Research Project Cooperator for five years.

Holstein Convention Awards Breakfast March 2

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — The Pennsylvania Holstein Convention awards breakfast is Saturday, March 2, at the Ramada Inn. The breakfast will be a full and fun morning of recognition and entertainment. Kendy Gable will sing the National Anthem and the Hoffman Brothers will supply background entertainment during the buffet breakfast.

Matt Lohr, guest speaker, loves living life to the fullest. In 29 years, he has personally visited with President George Bush three times, ridden a bull, hiked the Grand Canyon, flown a plane, climbed Mt. Fuji, and ran for political office.

He has traveled more than one million miles across 49 states and eight countries entertaining both students and adults. Lohr developed his passion for speaking through FFA. He went on to serve as state FFA president and National FFA vice president. After graduating from Virginia Tech in 1995, he founded the company "New Directions" Communications to spread his positive message.

Today Lohr and his family live in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia on the farm that has been in his family for five generations. Matt is an active member of Virginia Farm Bureau and a member of his county school board.

Along with hearing Lohr's positive message, the association will be recognizing a number of members for their achievements over the past year. All-Pennsylvania winners will be recognized along with Progressive Breeder and Genetic Herd Award winners. We will also recognize our membership solicitors who have excelled in membership recruitment and retention this year.

The central district host counties have put together a number of very nice items that will be auctioned off at the breakfast to raise funds for the junior association. There will also be a Labor Auction of Junior Executive Committee members who will supply a day of work at your farm or show, etc.

The Good Guy is Back

Teddy Roosevelt is bound to thrill everyone on Thursday, Feb. 28 when he comes to speak at the Pennsylvania Holstein Banquet in the Blair County Convention Center.

President Roosevelt was a pioneer of change, and Colonel of the RoughRiders. He brought Americans into the 20th Century — an American hero whose voice still lives on.

We are now standing on the threshold of a new century. Teddy Roosevelt can instill some hope, optimism, and well-needed energy and unity. Rekindle turn-of-the century virtues of courage, vision, persistence, and duty, and inspire courage to accept today's life changes and thrive on today's challenges.

The association will also be recognizing the Pennsylvania Holstein Association Hall of Fame Winners for 2002 and announcing the Distinguished Young Breeder Award winners as well. Following the dinner and program, Consord Sounds will provide dance music for the remainder of the evening.

Ladies Day Program

The Pennsylvania Holstein Association Ladies Day Program will be conducted at the beautiful, historic Calvin House. The group will board busses at 10:15 a.m. for a short trip to the Calvin House.

Storyteller Jan Kinney will begin the program. Her love for storytelling began as a child when her father and uncle would tell stories on Sunday afternoon. After 32 years as a high school librarian, Kinney became a full-time storyteller. She uses her body language, facial expressions, and voice inflections to tell her stories. She has told stories in churches, schools, caves and even tour busses. She believes in the power of storytelling. She said, "Storytelling is needed to get people to use their imaginations and to stop living the violence on TV, which is graphical and emotionally upsetting."

Following Jan Kinney the group will break for lunch. In addition to an anniversary salad, rolls and beverage, you will have a choice of two chicken crepes, two seafood crepes, or one of each. The program is on Friday, March 1st — this is during Lent, so keep this in mind when you are ordering your tickets. For dessert, we will enjoy apple dumplings with custard sauce.

After lunch, the Blair County Historical Society will present their "Wedding Belles" fashion show. This 45-minute presentation will feature women's fashions from 1770 to 1900. In addition to the changing fashions, the show will provide a look at wedding customs through the ages.

We will also have as our guests Rebecca Mowrer, Pennsylvania dairy princess, and two State Alternate Dairy Princesses, Sara Jennings and Amy Moyer.

Crop Agent: Watch Herbicide Resistance

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

GUTHRIESVILLE (Chester Co.) — Herbicide-resistant weeds and new sprays were two key topics addressed at a Southeast Pennsylvania Crop Conferences here last week.

The seminar was one of several conducted in the southeast region of the state for growers interested in keeping up to date on crop-related information.

Bill Curran of Penn State's Department of Crop and Soil Sciences spoke about developments in herbicide-resistant weeds and presented a summary of newly labeled herbicides available for corn.

"If you grow corn, you probably have resistant weeds," Curran said.

A resistant species of weed is one which is no longer controllable by a particular herbicide applied at a labeled rate which had effectively killed or suppressed that weed in the past.

"It used to work and now it doesn't," Curran said, summarizing the ineffectiveness of an herbicide when used on weeds that have developed resistance to it.

Triazine remains the most common type of herbicide to which some Pennsylvania weeds have become resistant. The late 1970s and '80s saw the steepest rise in weeds developing triazine resistance, with lambsquarters, pigweed, and scattered cases of giant foxtail among them.

Curran also noted other herbicides to which weeds have been observed developing resistance in the last several years, including the widely-used glyphosate.

The first glyphosate-resistance in the world was discovered in rigid ryegrass in Australia in 1996, according to Curran.

More recently, and closer to home, horseweed (also known as marestail) has been showing resistance to glyphosate in fields in Delaware, Maryland, and New Jersey.

Cases of resistant horseweed were reported in six independently located fields in 2000, according to Curran's data. In 2001, the number of cases increased to 23, including fields in Maryland and New Jersey.

Most of those cases were found in soybean fields, Curran said.

Resistance to another class of herbicide known as ALS-inhibitors is another relatively recent discovery.

Pigweed and shattercane resistance to ALS-inhibitors have been found in Pennsylvania, Curran noted. The first resistant shattercane was discovered last year in Franklin County.

"No herbicide is infallible," Curran said.

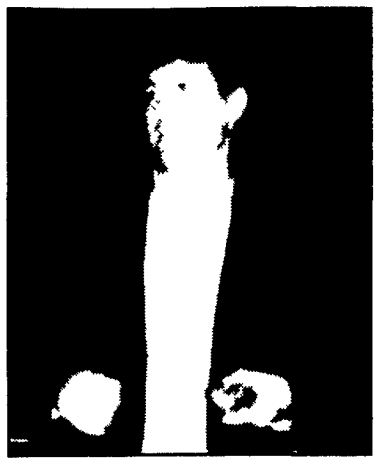
He outlined herbicide-resistant crop management strategies. These include:

- Rotate herbicides, possibly limiting ALS/ACCase-inhibitor applications to no more than one every two years, and limiting glyphosate to one application per season.
- Use more than one effective mode of weed control
- Avoid repeated use of the same herbicide
- Include nonchemical weed controls
- Watch closely for changes in weed populations/herbicide effectiveness
- Manage for the future.

Curran summarized the features of newly labeled herbicides for corn, including several products that control triazine-resistant weeds.

Other sessions on slate at the conference included a Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture talk on spray drift and a Pennsylvania Game Commission presentation on deer management.

Keith Mullin, a wildlife conservation officer, spoke about incentives and resources available to help farmers control deer damage to their crops.



Bill Curran updated crop producers on resistant weeds and on newly labeled herbicides.

Red And White Sets Record

CRYSTAL SPRING (Fulton Co.) — The Red and White Dairy Cattle Association (RWDCA) announces a new world record for milk production.

Elm-Park Moselle-Red-ET, bred and owned by Elm-Park Farms, Ltd. in Sheboygan Falls, Wis., has completed the new record production of 54,721 pounds of milk with 1,502 pounds of butterfat and 1,615 pounds of protein. Moselle's record-breaking lactation began at six years of age and is based on three times a day milking and a 365-day record.

In addition to outstanding production, Moselle is an outstanding individual for conformation, scoring Excellent-91 with an Excellent Mammary System and Excellent in feet and legs.

Moselle is a cow backed with the pedigree to support her outstanding production and performance, as a daughter of Kinglea Leader ~RC from Elm-Park Montana-ET ~RC. Montana is a Walkway Chief Mark daughter that scored Very Good-87 and produced a top record of 43,850 pounds of milk, 1,726 pounds of butterfat, and 1,397 pounds of protein as a 5-year-old. Montana in turn is from Elm Park Merit Mercy-Red-ET, a well-known brood cow who scored Excellent and was recognized as Dam of Merit and Gold Medal Dam. Mercy, a Misty Maples daughter of Bultman Muroc H Cavalier-Red is the dam of one of the breed's best sires today, Elm Park LaSalle-ET ~RC.

"Like others in her family, Moselle is a cow you don't want to be between her and her feed," said Louis Prange, of Elm Park Farms, where this outstanding cow family has been developed. "The entire family are extremely aggressive eaters, with great dairy characteristics and fast milk out." Moselle truly has been a trouble-fee cow her entire life."

Moselle has offspring by STVBQ Rubens exported to Columbia. She also has pregnancies due this year by Arnell Elegant and has been flushed again to Rubens.

The two-times per day, 365-day record holder is J-Don Bailee Mabel-Red-ET with a record of 54,190 pounds of milk in 365 days.

The Red and White Dairy Cattle Association was founded in 1964 to promote the breeding and development of Red and White dairy cattle and has been located in Crystal Spring since 1975. The association is based on the principle of an open herdbook. There are now more than 120,000 animals registered in the herdbook and 800 members in the association.

Comprehensive Dairy Herd Health Program At Lancaster County Dairy Day

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Management techniques, nutrition, and vaccines must work together to prevent infectious diseases. This program will focus on vaccine use and misuse while touching on the interactions of management and nutrition on vaccines and its importance to vaccination success.

Have you ever wondered when to vaccinate and for what? And what type of vaccine you should use — killed or modified live? And is "brand A" really much better than "brand B?"

These and other issues will be covered in "user friendly" terms. For more information, visit the following Website: http://capitaldairy.cas.psu.edu/

If you are involved in herd health decisions on the farm we encourage you to attend this informative workshop and learn how to make your vaccination successful.

Mid-Atlantic Agriculture Can Remain Viable If Producers Manage Risk, Become 'Engaged'

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — For Mid-Atlantic fruit and vegetable producers to be successful, risk has to be managed.

Producers can manage that risk by purchasing insurance. In a big way, they can also manage other risks to their livelihood. Sometimes, they simply have to "lay the plow down and become township supervisors," said Sam Hayes Jr., state secretary of agriculture.

Hayes spoke on a special panel looking toward the future of the industry Wednesday afternoon at the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

At the panel, Sen. Mike Waugh (R-28th) and Dr. Theodore Alter, director of Penn State Cooperative Extension, joined Hayes. Panel moderator was William Kleiner, Penn State Cooperative Extension.

According to Waugh, many producers don't want to become involved in politics. Yet for whatever their dislikes, "If you don't get involved in it, someone's going to be doing it for you," Waugh said.

Legislators are active in many ways to ensure the state remains economically healthy and agriculture remains viable. This is by way of direct assistance (through grants or loans), and subsidies and assistance on losses. Some of those plans help family farms directly, such as an overhaul of the state inheritance tax so the family farm can be transferred with fewer burdens.

And many issues, such as the current water crisis caused by years of constant drought, remain at the forefront and will be subject to legislative scrutiny.

According to Alter of Penn State, producers have to be distinctly aware of a changing economic landscape. They must be able to adapt and adjust to those changes, ranging from strategies to communicate with service providers, learning to operate as a true business, becoming adjusted to an online world, understanding micromarkets and niche marketing, keeping up with new crop technologies, becoming aware of water quantity issues, discovering the benefits of land tenure and long-term leasing, knowing about exotic pests and pestilences, and the ever-changing nature of consumer needs.

Alter reminded attendees that the First Farm Enterprise Transition Conference is scheduled Feb. 7 at University Park.

But for producers to remain viable, according to Secretary Hayes, "risk management has to be considered if we want to be successful," he told those who attended. "We can ameliorate things we don't have control over, such as weather" and other factors, he noted.

And we're "not expected to be doing the same things five or 10 years from now as we do today," he said. Looking at those social and economic forces is critical, to be "perceptive, adaptive, and nimble," he said. "We can't be sloth-like or live in a cave. We must be proactive. Agriculture should run agriculture business and not allow it to be run by others."

Producers should learn how to use risk management tools such as crop insurance to "not allow ourselves to be completely beholden to the laws of nature," he said.

And where townships have become negative toward agriculture, "we have to engage ourselves in that public policy debate.

"There is no silver bullet. You have to get out there. You can't be on the 50th row on at the 50-yard line. You have to go down on the field and put on the helmet. You have to be engaged agriculturally."

Grower experiences through a "visit to the farm" was the subject of a panel Wednesday.

John Mason, Mason Farms from Lake City in Erie County, spoke about his 300-acre operation with two farm markets and a wholesale produce business.

He focused on small fruit culture and varieties, including raspberry production.

All raspberries are under drip irrigation at the farm. "Raspberries are crops that we haven't dedicated our attention to, and we should have," said Mason.

Mason uses a 2-wire trellis system on 12-foot centers.

Mason Farms does a lot of weed spraying along edges of rows, with a specially constructed guarded sprayer.

Weed control is critical in the centers, but Mason cautioned against using Roundup, which makes cultivars susceptible to herbicide injury.

Mason noted that he likes to subsoil his strawberries before renovating them. He mentioned that to sell them, "you have to know what is invested in the crop to know what to charge for it," he said.

He provided detail about one grower who set up a market stand specifically to sell strawberries through making shortcake. The menu board provides various ways to order the shortcake at the "Garden of Eatin."

Mark Ciotoli, a grower from central New Jersey the past two decades, planted red raspberries on rented acreage behind Delicious Orchards in Monmouth County. Ciotoli planted 10 acres on sandy loam soil with lots of clay layers.

The store in front of the acreage receives about 2.5 million customers per year. Ciotoli spoke about the challenges of farming in an area booming with expensive housing developments and the challenges of testing out trellis systems (permanent and "swing" systems) and how to grow raspberries (if they don't want to grow, he noted, try blackberries on wetter soils).

"Pay attention to soils," said Ciotoli. "Make this ground sink."

Ben Allnutt of Homestead Farm, located 19 miles northwest of the border of Washington, D.C., noted that in Montgomery County, 90,000 acres are in agricultural preservation with 45,000 acres under easement.

Allnutt spoke about his deer population control system on 229 acres, which provides a surprising 90 percent control at 50 cents per foot using fiberglass posts.

The farm grows peaches, cherries, "everything but blueberries," he said. The soil is a red, riverbottom, clay-silt soil. The farm sells about 96 percent of what is grown at the produce stand.

The Allnutts have a flatbed strawberry system.

The farm also raises thorny berries from Arkansas that the customers like, even though, he said, people go to pick and then later "ask for Band-Aids," he said.

The farm has pick-your-own peaches that sell for $1.29 per pound or 99 cents if customers self-pick 10 pounds or more. The Allnutts sell quarter-peck cartons already picked. They sell pick your own apples for 59 cents per pound over 20 pounds minimum.

More information from the convention is scheduled in the March 9 Lancaster Farming Grower & Marketer.

The Cocoa Suites at the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention featured apple cultivar taste testing.

Equine Science University 2002 Feb. 16

GAY BROWNLEE
Virginia Correspondent

LEXINGTON, Va. — Interested persons have until Feb. 13 to register for the Equine Science University 2002 on Saturday, Feb. 16 at the Virginia Horse Center.

Sponsored by the Virginia Cooperative Extension Virginia Horse Council in cooperation with the Virginia Horse Industry Board, the seminar will include performance demonstrations, training technique demonstrations and discussion.

Live demonstrations will be inside the coliseum and those participating are urged to dress warmly.

Expert trainer and horseman Bill Heizer, Shenandoah Valley, from 9:30 a.m.-10 a.m., will present "Starting the Young Horse Using Longlines."

Heizer has started and trained hundreds of horses in every discipline and is known for having strong communication and teaching skills.

From 10:45 a.m.-noon, "Training the Performance Horse" will be presented by Clark Bradley from the Center of Equine Studies, University of Findlay, Ohio.

A graduate of Texas Christian University and a 30-year veteran of the horse training industry, Bradleys resume of achievements includes 1994 inductee into the NRHA Hall of Fame, 24-year director of the Ohio Quarter Horse Association, and a 1988 honorary director inductee of OQHA. He is also a two-time winner of NRHA Futurity and a winner of multiple championships at the All-American Quarter Horse Congress.

For 21 years Bradley has conducted adult and youth horsemanship schools. He is an approved AQHA and NRHA judge.

After lunch Bradley will cover "Bits and Bitting." Besides being a bit judge at the Quarter Horse Congress, he is a collector of bits.

Dr. Wally Palmer, clinical instructor in production management medicine, equine specialist, DVM, MS, VA-MD Regional College of Veterinary Medicine, will present "The Tortuous Path To Sorting Out A Mystery, Lameness/Soreness."

Palmer, from 2:15 p.m.-3:15 p.m. will enlighten participants about what is important to know and what questions to ask to sort out the mystery of lameness and soreness, and what is involved in getting a referral and in getting a lameness diagnosis at Virginia Tech.

Then, from 3:15 p.m.-4:15 p.m. during the final session, the doctor will present "You Have Your Diagnosis — What Now?"

Participants will learn about treatment alternatives, including shoeing, physical therapy, nutritive additives, and drug therapy. The other important piece of knowledge is what works and what you should know before you put money down.

Comprehensive Nutrient Management Plans Pilot Project Under Way

Kenneth B. Kephart
Penn State
Professor Of Animal Science

The Environmental Protection Agency will soon require that all Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations (CAFO) and many Animal Feeding Operations (AFO) develop site-specific Comprehensive Nutrient Management Plans (CNMPs) to minimize the impacts on water quality and public health.

A comprehensive nutrient management plan is a component of an overall conservation plan used in conjunction with crop rotations, residue management, pest management, and conservation buffers, or other conservation practices needed on a site-specific basis. Six elements are addressed in a CNMP: 1) manure and wastewater handling and storage, 2) land treatment practices, 3) nutrient management, 4) record keeping, 5) feed management, 6) other utilization practices.

In order to determine the time and cost required to develop a CNMP, the National Pork Board is funding a pilot project in seven states: Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, and Michigan. Six producers from each state will work closely with plan writers from the National Pork Board, as well as the local nutrient management specialist, NRCS personnel, and nutritional consultants. This effort will help both EPA, as well as CNMP writers, streamline the process when the regulations finally take effect.

All pork CAFOs and some AFOs will be required to have a CNMP developed by 2003 and implemented by 2005. All AFOs are encouraged to have a CNMP developed by 2010.

If you are planning to build a new swine facility or expand an existing operation, Penn State Cooperative Extension offers free consultation for proper siting, including suggestions for building placement to reduce negative odor and environmental impacts.

To schedule an evaluation, contact either Ken Kephart (814) 863-3671 or Bob Mikesell (814) 865-2987, swine extension specialists at Penn State University.

New Swine Finishing Barn

Several 2000 head finishing barns recently constructed in Pennsylvania provide open housing for pigs, and nearly eliminate labor associated with sorting hogs for market. These "self-sorting" barns contain four large pens housing approximately 500 pigs each. Large pens containing many pigs reduce fighting and social competition common to pigs housed in smaller groups.

Gates separate a small section of each pen into a feeding area. For pigs to reach the feeding area, they must travel through a set of automatic scales. After eating at the automatic feeding stations, pigs return to the loafing area via a one-way gate. As pigs approach market weight, the scale computer individually weighs each pig as it enters the feeding area. If the pig exceeds the minimum weight for slaughter, the exit gate from the scale directs the pig into a "sorted" pen of pigs heavy enough for slaughter. Pigs that do not exceed the minimum weight enter the feeding area as usual.

Sorted pigs can then be loaded onto trucks with minimal time and labor.

An additional potential advantage to the system is to have the scales track the number of pigs within 10 to 15 pounds of the minimum weight. This information could be used to estimate how many hogs would be available for slaughter the following week.

Research Highlights

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Pigs consume less water from a wet-dry feeder compared to those on conventional feeders or wet-dry feeders used as a dry feeder.

The wet-dry feeder has a nipple waterer mounted in the trough. In the first experiment, pigs gained nearly seven percent faster on the wet-dry feeder and consumed 23 percent less water. No differences in digestibility, or the incidence of ulcers, were found among the different feeding systems.

In the second experiment, no differences were observed in growth rate, but pigs on the wet-dry feeders gained more efficiently and consumed 58 percent less water. (Amornthewphat, N. et al. Abstracts 128 and 129).

Growth performance is similar in pigs grouped 10, 20, 40, or 80 animals per pen. Growth rate and feed intake dropped only slightly as group size increased, but the values were not statistically different. Furthermore, there were no differences in injuries or disease among the various group sizes.

The research indicates that pigs may perform normally in large groups sizes, as long as floor space and feeder access are increased proportionately. (Schmolke and Gonyou. Abstract 57).

The phosphorous contained in both corn and soybeans is relatively unavailable because it is in the form of phytate. New low phytate of corn and soybean varieties, which will be commercially available in three to five years, have similar amounts of total phosphorus, but the availability of phosphorus is much higher.

In fact, pigs fed diets formulated with low-phytate corn, low phytate soybean meal, and no supplemental phosphorus have normal growth performance and bone strength. In addition, phosphorus excretion is reduced by more than 50 percent.

This technology shows promise for the emerging concern regarding elevated phosphate concentrations found in soils subjected to repeated manure application.

Beef Packing Questions Addressed At Cattle Feeder's Day

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Steve Van Lannen, vice president of cattle production systems for Smithfield Beef Enterprises, as it is currently named, spoke during the afternoon session of Cattle Feeder's Day. The session answered some of the questions that producers have been asking since Smithfield's purchase of Moyer Packing Company (Mopac) in June.

Smithfield Beef Enterprises is a consolidation of four independent companies including, besides Mopac, Souderton; Packerland Packing, Green Bay, Wis.; Murco Foods, Inc., Plainwell, Mich.; and Sun Land Beef Company, Tolleson, Ariz.

The Mopac plant kills between 1,500-1,800 head per day. According to Van Lannen the plant will continue to kill dairy animals and high-quality black and Crossbred animals, plus add high-energy calf-fed Holsteins with conformation similar to Crossbreds.

"Communication is going to become the tie that binds everything together," he said. "It's going to become increasingly important as we move forward."

Smithfield, traditionally a hog operation that is a "case study in vertical integration," will not approach the beef industry with the same mindset, said Van Lannen.

"On the beef side of this business, we probably won't do the same kind of vertical integration. You'll probably hear me talk more about vertical coodination," he said.

Drawing upon the expertise of experts in the industry on the local level will be more of a priority. "We can't lose sight of the fact that the beef industry is about converting local resources. If we don't do that, then we're going to lose our competitive edge," he said.

In addition to using local expertise, "We are going to focus on getting cattle locally," he said. However, "Growth depends on a viable supply;" consequently, "We also want to spur growth around here as well."

"What we're going to try to do is get involved to spur cattle feeding in this part of the country," said Van Lannen. However, he does not anticipate getting all of the packer's beef needs served in Pennsylvania.

Looking pragmatically at the situation, it pays to have a local supply, he said, mentioning that the company saves freight "by not moving cattle to the Plains and bringing them back.

"Pennsylvania producers are geared up pretty nicely as we look at case-ready beef with population centers in your backyard," he said.

Besides the freight issues, freshness and shelf life also work to make local supply important. With a limited 8-10 day shelf life for case-ready beef, it is not economical to ship product from the Midwest and lose several days of shelf life in transport. Consequently, the push toward case-ready beef will come out of this region, said Van Lannen.

Smithfield Beef Enterprises will offer several tools for producer marketing.

One no-cost hedging opportunity is forward contracting, where a producer can lock in a price at a specified time prior to sending the cattle to the plant. The delivery contract is based off of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. "This assures timely marketing and kill availability," he said.

On the other hand, "If you're going to contract, you need to know the cost of production nor you could lock yourself in for a loss," he said.

"Forward contracting will become a bigger part of our business, but it's not for everyone and it's not for everyone all the time," he said.

Smithfield Beef Enterprises is also working on financing cattle for producers with a credit corporation. The producer provides the feed and labor and the cattle come back to the packer in the agreement. It is a lower-cost financing opportunity for a young cattle feeder or a producer looking to expand.

The business may also finance building or expanding a facility.

Another producer tool is a partnership with an independent company with a consulting agreement to provide feeder cattle.

"The bottom line of producer programs is that we're going to have to work harder to communicate," he said.

"We want to turn our cattle buyers into field representatives who can convert the language that we talk in the plant to a language you can understand. We all need to work together in this business to figure out where profitability is going to come from."

In the next several months the packer will re-align buyers that will "have several hats" and understand the business from financing to contracting. In addition there will be a regional head buyer in each plant.

The packer is looking more toward spurring growth than in feeding cattle. "It would not be our preference to feed cattle in this area," he said. Risk, among other reasons, means that "We would rather not feed cattle directly."

Smithfield Beef Enterprises is now open to getting groups of cattle put together by several producers, however "straight truckloads will be more of the norm" in the future, according to Van Lannen.

As for premiums, "BQA cattle will receive a premium — if we can sell it," he said. "We have to be able to market the value in it." In time, BQA and source-verified cattle will become standard, as "Today's value-added product will be tomorrow's commodity," he said.

Packers are getting more and more specific about the types of cattle they kill, said Van Lannen. Packers will begin "sorting at the front end, buying different types of cattle that will fit certain programs," he said.

Van Lannen would like to see 80 percent corn or an equivalent, such as dry distiller's grain or cornflakes, fed to the animals.

The company will continue to purchase meat from auction markets "as long as we can get the quantity and types of cattle we need," he said. He does, however, see a decrease in the use of auction markets as time progresses.

"To communicate more what the consumer wants, it's going to be done through contracting," he said.

Mount Joy Cooperative Posts Successful Year

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — With an average milk price of $16.11 and a 6.3 percent increase in production, Mount Joy Farmers Cooperative was able to celebrate a successful year in fiscal 2001, according to management reports.

More than 500 people turned out for the cooperative's annual meetings recently conducted in three locations throughout the membership area, including the East Fairview Church of the Brethren here.

Fifty-three new members in 2001 increased the number of active producers in the Mount Joy-based cooperative to 321 in a 10-county area in the southeastern part of the state, according to general manager Dale Hershey.

Producer members received a dividend of six cents per hundredweight for milk produced in 2001. That's more than twice as much as the dividend passed out a year ago, Hershey said.

With member herd sizes ranging from 18 to 600 cows and averaging 79 cows per herd, total milk production exceeded a half billion pounds in 2001, up nearly 30 million pounds from 2000 figures.

Board Chairman Don Risser told members that the cooperative will continue to grow at a moderate pace.

"We do plan to grow, but carefully," said Risser, who operates Meadow Vista Farms with brother Gerald and son Eric.

"We will continue to develop strategies that are beneficial to small producers," he said.

Hershey said that the relatively small number of producers in the cooperative allows for a high degree of member input into decision making.

"We get advice from our farmers day to day," he said.

Members also heard reports on what the year might hold in milk prices.

While the $16.11 per hundredweight average milk price in 2001 was higher than expected, experts predict a downturn in 2002.

Penn State dairy economist Ken Bailey told cooperative members that milk prices this year will likely average from $1 to $2 less per hundredweight than in 2001.

Bailey said factors that could influence milk prices include a likely increase in U.S. milk supply and competition from other milk-producing countries such as New Zealand.

"The outlook depends on a lot of things," Bailey said, noting that his milk price prediction for 2001 turned out to be about $3 per hundredweight too low.

Bailey affirmed the ability of area producers to remain competitive, pointing out that Lancaster County has nearly the highest production rate per cow in the nation.

"You can compete with any level in the country," he said.

Ken Miller, center, was recognized for 30 years of service on the Mount Joy Farmers Cooperative board of directors. Joining him, from left, are Dale Hershey, manager, and Don Risser, board chairman.

Dairylea representative Clyde Rutherford told the group that despite a nine percent loss in dairy sales since Sept. 11, the dairy business looks positive for 2002.

"We're very bullish on the future," he said.

New cheese products being offered by Taco Bell and Wendy's restaurants are among the reasons to be positive, Rutherford noted.

Mount Joy Farmers Cooperative became an affiliate member of Dairylea/ Dairy Marketing Services (DMS) in 1997.

DMS markets about 50 percent of the milk sold in the northeast U.S., Rutherford said.

Mount Joy Farmers Cooperative milk markets include Kemps Foods in Lancaster, York, and Philadelphia; Turkey Hill; Clover Foods; Dean Foods; and Dietrich Milk Products.

Receiving special recognition at the meeting was Ken Miller for 30 years of service on the Mount Joy Farmers Cooperative Board of Directors.

Miller began dairy farming in the Manheim/Mount Joy area in 1967. His son, Kervin, now manages the operation.

Meadow Vista Farms was also awarded for a long stretch of consecutive monthly quality milk premiums more than four year's worth.

Farms receiving 100 percent inspection ratings in 2001 were Walnut Run Farms, Emmanuel Lantz, Christ Fisher Farm 1, Amos K. Allgyer, Robert L. Shelley, Kenneth Harnish, and Leslie P. Nolt.

Delaware Valley College Awarded $118,000 DEP Grant

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — Delaware Valley College has announced it has received a $118,000 grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Environment Protection (DEP) which will assist the College in establishing a Watershed Assessment and Restoration Plan on the DelVal campus.

Delaware Valley College is located within a 400-acre sub watershed of the Neshaminy Creek. The college itself is the watershed. With Del Val's mixture of urban and agricultural areas, there have been effects on the water quality.

This grant will allow the College to become a living laboratory where environmental data will be collected and reviewed to create a "master watershed plan" and "best management practices (BMPs)" to improve water quality. The project will also allow students, as well as government officials, to see first-hand the BMPs on the watershed and their effects on surface and groundwater.

The living laboratory will be used to study long-term water quality and BMPs and provide water quality data to government agencies. This updated material will also be offered to schools as an educational tool and the site will be open for tours to show the relationship between BMPs and water quality.

different, broader view of the farmer's job description. In addition to producing food, the European farmer is expected to play a significant role in supporting rural economies and in protecting the environment. This is additional work, and it requires more farmers, not fewer.

Don't American farmers have the same goals for their communities and their environment? Of course they do. Two decades of working with farmers have, if nothing else, taught me that the farmer's heart is in the right place. But it is unrealistic for public policy to, on one hand, ask farmers to do more, and on the other hand, to talk of needing fewer farmers.

The European idea may not seem new for U.S. farmers, but we apply it all the time to other professions. Teachers, for example, must pass textbook knowledge along to students. But they also must encourage students and lend excitement to learning. They must be the first to diagnose all types of student problems. They must participate in the overall process of making sure that their school provides the best possible learning environment.

This is why, in spite of new teaching technologies, we continue to prefer smaller class sizes and more teachers. The same reasoning applies to nurses, police officers, and many other professions. We want more of them, not fewer.

But somehow, the language of teachers, of nurses, and of police officers does not apply to farmers in this country. Surely, the best of farmers cannot do as much for the environment when they are responsible for 2,000 acres instead of 200, or 500 dairy cows instead of 50. And no one thinks that rural communities will be better off if we pursue a policy that basically "lays off" good farmers and asks them to move elsewhere.

It's time we stopped inventing policies to reward the largest farmers and do without the rest. Instead, we should be talking of farmers the way we do teachers, nurses, and other providers of services we all value. We would be better off with more farmers, not fewer.

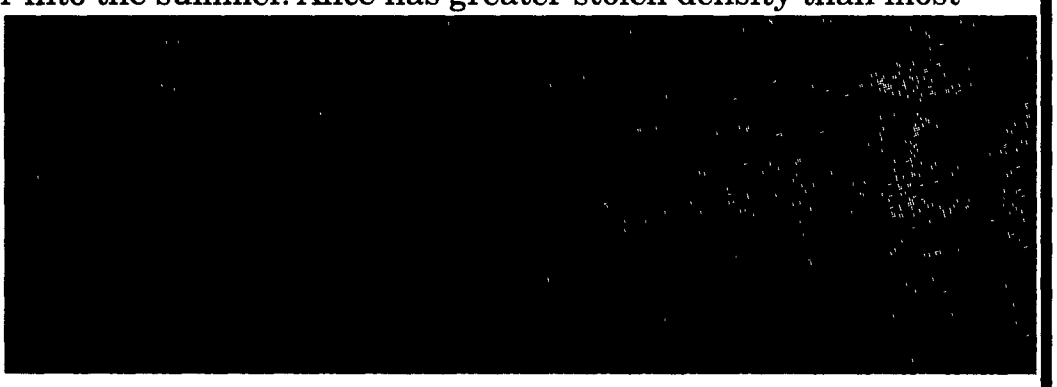
IT'S ABOUT TIME

To Frost Seed Alice White Clover

Alice is a tall large leafed white clover developed for exceptional yields of palatable high quality forage. Alice clover has shown tremendous nitrogen fixing benefits for the grass (especially ryegrass) that grows with it. We've had many comments that the pastures with Alice stay green longer into the summer. Alice has greater stolen density than most ladino type clovers allowing for better persistence under grazing. Recent studies show an increased dry matter intake of 2 pounds per cow per day if clover is included in the pasture.



ORGANIC FARMERS!! BE SURE TO HAVE PLENTY OF ALICE IN YOUR PASTURES TO MAKE NITROGEN.

On the spur of the moment these women stirred up one of their favorite recipes and held an impromptu meal for about 50 people. Some of their specialties include recipes handed down through the generations, or their own perfected recipes and family favorites. Seated from left are Lois Peachey, Wanda Yoder, and Rachel Kanagy. Standing from left are Joyce Havice, Wendy Bison, Joyce Hostettler, Susan Kauffman, Vivian Bonson, Helen Pennepacker, Sarah Goddard, Danielle Smoker holding Lauren, and Turie Alwine.

Barrville Mennonite Church Shares Food, Recipes

LOU ANN GOOD

BARRVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — The first Sunday of every month members of Barrville Mennonite Church gather together for food and fellowship in the social hall.

Turie Alwine and her husband Clarence always bring Amish potatoes because "no one else can make them as good," said a member.

Otherwise, the selection changes from month to month with others bringing one of their specialties. The church is famous for good food and fun. So when Wendy Bison starting attending the church two years ago, she was amazed that the women had never published a cookbook.

Under her prodding, members compiled their recipes in a cookbook to sell as a fundraiser for the church building fund.

The cookbook, "Sharing Our Best" is a wire spiral-bound easel-style that stands up for easy readability when preparing a recipe.

The cookbook includes such family favorites as Oma's Hay-Makin-Day Doughnuts. Wendy explained that recipe is one her family has served for many generations. "The doughnuts were always made on hay making day and served at the 3 p.m. break that we called tea time."

Although many of the cooks prepared recipes by adding a pinch of that and a walnut-size amount of that, those such as Turie and Clarence Alwine—famous for their Amish potatoes—needed to determine exact measurements to write down.

Wendy explained that the cookbook also includes some recipes from the Amish and Mennonite communities who live nearby.

Barrville is a tiny community nestled on the edge of what is known as Big Valley in Mifflin County. The official address for those who live in the area is either Reedsville or Belleville because Barrville does not have a post office, bank, hardware store or any other business generally associated with a town.

The first church on the property was built in 1852. For the next 100 years, the church was operated sporadically by Methodists, Lutherans, Presbyterians, Pentecostals, and Mennonites. The Mennonites established a congregation during the 1950s and built a new church that was finished in 1959.

Although the congregation is small, the membership is close-knit and finds many occasions to work and eat together. The most notable time is the monthly fellowship meals.

Readers are invited to drop by during a fellowship meal at the church on the first Sunday of every month.

"We don't know what will be served, because we never assign people to bring a particular dish. Sometimes we end up with lots of desserts and other times with casseroles, but surprisingly most of the time we have a nice selection of everything," Wanda Yoder said.

For a copy of the cookbook, send a check made out to Barrville Mennonite church for $10 plus $3 for postage and handling to Wendy Bison, 127 Stuckey Lane, Reedsville, PA 17084.

Here are some recipes from the cookbook.

1-2-3 APPLE PIE

2 eggs
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1½ cups sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup flour
1 cup chopped nuts
2 cups peeled, diced apples
2 tablespoons milk

Mix together all ingredients until moist. Place in buttered 10-inch pie pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 30-40 minutes or until done. Serves 8-10.

If a sweet apple such as yellow delicious is used, decrease the amount of sugar to one cup. Serve with ice cream. It's delicious.

Mary Ella Saner

⅔ cup butter, melted
⅓ cup confectioners' sugar
1 package Dream Whip (prepared as directed on package)
6-ounces cream cheese

On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

The cows think it's April.

At least that's what one dairy market report I recently read speculated, considering that milk production around the country seems to be picking up into a heavier-flow, springlike mode.

Four pairs of wild mallard ducks also seem to think it's later than the calendar says. They've moved onto the pond, ducking and diving and splashing with seemingly no care in the world. Given that they have a relatively open winter, open water, and open access to lots of stray bits of grain to pick and peck around the meadow, they really don't have a care in the world. Unless there's a late duck hunting season somewhere around the region.

About a dozen Canadian geese began showing up about the same time the ducks descended. Usually they come honking in from the northeast along with the morning sunshine, to splash in a chilly bath. Likely some of the same geese hatched and raised on the pond, they generally stay only a short time. Apparently they have lots of meadows and lots of ponds to visit in their daily schedule books, probably checking out potential spring nesting sites.

A ladybug which just — while writing this — began mountain climbing the steep face of my computer screen, may also feel some springtime urgency. When she (or "he," since there must be some guy ladybugs) toppled off the slippery slope, absent of safety climbing ropes, I scooped her up with a piece of paper and deposited her in a dish garden of houseplants to go date-searching.

The groundhogs, on the other hand, know doggone well it isn't April.

And despite their predictions, those furry little soybean-plant-eaters will snooze their days away underground, snuggled up in fur coats. Why climb out of bed when there's no greenery outside the door to chomp on for breakfast? Let the goofy two-legged types stand out on chilly, February mornings to celebrate rodent weather prognosticators.

Like the groundhogs, we await greenery and the feel of soft grass underfoot. But, we two-legged types haven't figured out how to curl up and snooze through winter's duration while still paying the heat and electric bills. So, we improvise.

"Mom, may I borrow some plants?" asked our daughter a week or two ago. "I really need to have something green and fresh around the house." A good portion of the mish-mosh of plants wintering in our little greenhouse came from their yard to begin with, so they'll just be going back home.

So, while The Farmer ponders soil-test recommendations and plots computer field maps, I offer manure-tea and one-sided conversation to the greenhouse and windowsill residents, already responding to longer days and increasingly bright sunshine. Geraniums and impatiens have bloomed continuously in various shades of pink and red. Several clumps of dianthus add blossoms of fushia, white and variegated hues. A leggy petunia dangles a perky, purple bloom over the edge of a hanging basket.

And weed seedlings are already poking up through the various plants.

But, too much warmth, too soon, for too long, will only bode bad for fruit trees, shrubs, and perennials. So, like so many tempting things, we long for it, even while we realize it's not in our best interest.

Go back to bed and check in with us in about six weeks.

The Lancaster County Department of Parks and Recreation will present an introduction to metal detectors entitled Metal Detection 101, on Wednesday, Feb. 6. The program will take place at 7 p.m. in the Environmental Center Barn located along Eshelman Mill Road.

Participants will learn how to go about purchasing equipment, methods of searching and locations available to detect. The program is free, however, individuals are asked to preregister by calling the Park office at (717) 299-8215.

Choosing And Caring For Sweaters

Sweater and winter weather just naturally go together. A wide range of fibers and an infinite variety of yarns mean there is a sweater suitable for every occasion.

A bit of buyer awareness is important when purchasing a sweater that is compatible with your lifestyle. For an active lifestyle, choose sweaters with harder, tighter yarns. Soft, loose yarns tend to stretch easily, making them suitable for more sedentary events. Special decorative trims, such as suede, leather, snakeskin, fur, sequins, and beads, many mean that the sweaters needs extra-special care. The sweater itself may be durable, but the trim may not. Check the store's return policy before purchasing such a sweater in case the trim creates maintenance problems.

When a sweater needs cleaning, read and follow the care label instructions. Depending on the problem, stretching, shrinkage, pulls, and pilling, these may occur from improper cleaning or as a result of general wear and tear. Some stretching is part of the normal behavior of a sweater knit. The softer the knit, the more likely it is to undergo some change of texture during normal wear.

Many sweaters are handwash only. If this is the case, it is best to dry the sweater flat. I may be necessary to trace its outline onto a piece of brown or craft paper before cleaning. This outline can be used as a pattern to block the damp sweater to its original size and shape.

If it is safe to tumble dry the sweater on low heat, the care label will give you this information. Some sweaters can be machine-washed using the gentle cycle. Whether by hand or machine, be sure to use the type of laundry detergent recommended for the fiber. If the sweater is labeled "dry clean only" an in dryer kit may be a convenient solution. These kits are effective in removing odors, such as stale tobacco, perspiration and light soil. They work well on sweaters with beads, sequins and other special trims. Follow the product label instructions and check for colorfastness before using a stain removal system or cloth.

Longer Life For Leather

Leather is enjoying popularity as a fashion fabric. Designers are incorporating it as a year-round fashion fabric. New technologies have made caring for leather easier than ever before.

Some everyday care tips will make maintenance easier. For example, wearing a neck scarf will protect the collar area from perspiration, body oils and hair tonics. Storing in a cool, well-ventilated place will keep it from drying out or attracting mildew.

If the garment gets wet, air-dry it away from heat. Be sure to read and save the care information that comes with the leather garment.

If leather gets dirty, there are special soaps, sometimes called saddle soaps, that can be spread onto the garment and then removed with a moist cloth. Another solution is to look for a professional cleaner who specializes in leather cleaning.

Heifer International Appeal For China

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) —

Since 1944, Heifer International has helped over four million impoverished families in 120 countries and 38 states become self-reliant through the gift of food and income producing animals. In the year 2000 more than 30,000 families received animals.

Heifer's "living loan" of an animal helps families lift themselves out of poverty and achieve self-reliance. Milk, eggs, meat, and other benefits from animals improve nutrition and health. All Heifer projects include well-planned environmental components.

The program works at the grass roots level with an approach that lets people make their own decision about how to improve their lives. Heifer requires that families repay the loans by 'Passing on the Gift" of one or more animal's offspring to other needy families.

Dr. Pu Jiabi, country director for Heifer China said that economic growth in China has increased rapidly in recent years. The Chinese people have a strong interest in improving nutrition and the government is paying attention to this fact by promoting dairy production and consumption. It is a similar situation to the "White Revolution" in India 40 years ago, yet even more serious. The government plans to increase milk production and consumption five times within the next five years.

Right now, milk production is just seven liters per capita per year, much lower than the average of the world and much lower even than India.

In the areas where Heifer has community projects, dairy cattle are the most profitable farm animal compared to other commonly raised livestock.

Chinese farmers like dairy cattle very much. However, the quality of dairy cattle is very poor in China. Average milk production per lactation is just around 5,000 liters. Milk production by poorer farmers is just 3,000 to 4,000 liters per lactation. With improved genetics, this can improve dramatically, helping farm families escape from poverty more quickly.

PLAN: Heifer China plans to assist the increase in dairy product consumption through a dairy improvement project. We plan to import improved quality dairy heifers and maintain a closed-herd breeding center using already-existing local partners. We will pass on the offspring to poor farmers in our project areas using currently established Heifer International project training models and guidelines. We will also use better quality dairy semen and frozen embryos with the local dairy cows to upgrade existing small dairy herds.

Heifer China has funding to purchase 60 quality pregnant heifers in the USA and ship them to the breeding center in China. An agreement has been signed with a Chinese livestock import/export company. That company has signed, in turn, a contract with a U.S.-based company to purchase a full planeload of pregnant heifers. Due to a cancelled order by another Chinese purchaser, the plane has room for 50 more heifers.

Heifer International is looking for funding to purchase heifers or the donation of heifers to make up the full load on the plane. We prefer heifers that are three to six months pregnant. As an alternative, we would prefer young heifers at least six months old. The Heifer China program will pay about $2,000 for shipping and $300 for quarantine fees per head. Thus, heifers of lesser production background will not be sought from the U.S.

Donated heifers should have dam's records of 8,000 to 12,000 liters per lactation .

The U.S. Quarantine station is in Harrisburg, and the shipper would like to have animals in the station in early February.

Call Wendy Peskin (887) 663-1681 or e-mail to wendy.peskin@heifer.org.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County Department of Parks and Recreation will present a program on the history of the Pennsylvania Barn on Sunday, Feb. 3 from 2 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. The presentation will take place inside an actual 19th Century Pennsylvania barn which today serves as the Lancaster County Environmental Center. This building is located along Eshelman Mill Road in Central Park.

The program will explore the origins and evolution of the Pennsylvania barn. It will be given by barn expert Robert Ensminger who has written and researched exclusively on the subject. His program will include slides and photographs. Also available that day will be autographed copies of his book, The Pennsylvania Barn, It's Origin, Evolution and Distribution in North America.

The program is free, however, participants are asked to preregister by contacting the Park office at (717) 299-8217.

Avoid Creosote Buildup

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Creosote is a by-product of wood burning which is formed from unburned gases that condense onto the surfaces of the wood burning system, especially the flue. Although you cannot eliminate creosote, by purchasing the right size woodstove and operating it properly on a daily basis, you can minimize its formation and at the same time get more heat output from your wood. There are three guidelines to follow for reducing creosote buildup.

The first is to burn dry wood. Dry firewood is wood that has been cut, split, and stored under cover for nine months to a year before being burned.

The second guideline involves burning the wood as completely as possible. This means always allowing enough air in the stove to maintain hot flames which will increase the combustion of the wood. A hotter fire and more complete burning results and less creosote.

The third guideline involves warming the flue as quickly as possible. Keep the stove drafts wide open when the fire is first lit and keep them wide open for at least 30 minutes or more so the heat from the fire warms the chimney flue.

This will cause a strong upward draft in the chimney. The draft will exit the smoke faster from the chimney and will result in less creosote build-up.

Never close the drafts completely. This shuts off air supply to the fire and prevents wood from completely burning. If you still have an excessive amount of creosote accumulation after following these steps, you should check for an incorrect chimney height or size and lack of incoming air to the fire.

Consuming Thoughts

As you start the New Year and look at your last year's budget you may notice that the dollars spend on food increased dramatically. Prices at the supermarket actually have not increased at the rate you see in your year-end financial budget for food.

So, where is all the money for food going? Take a hard look at your eating habits and patterns. If you are eating out more often, you'll notice an increase in the food budget and you may come to realize that your own best and cheapest restaurant in town is your own kitchen.

Think about why you eat out? Are you short on time, too tired to cook, or just looking for convenience and entertainment? Perhaps you can change these patterns and save money in the process. Hear are a few money saving ideas:

• Plan ahead the meals for one week and take advantage of food specials at the supermarket.

• In time crunch, remember that prepared foods from the supermarket are often less expensive than eating out. Deli's often have a variety of prepared foods from which to pick and choose. Compare the cost of the prepared deli item with the cost of a similar product that is in the frozen food department. Buying foods in large quantities at food clubs often is less expensive if you figure the cost per meal.

• Freeze meals ahead of time. Make double or triple batches so you will have frozen meals on hand.

• Delegate meal responsibilities to different family members on different nights according to their schedule — sports, meetings, and so forth.

• Save up for a special occasion night or save up and buy those special, expensive foods you like to eat out and make an elegant dinner at home at half the cost.

• Brown bag lunches. Bring prepackaged coffee or hot chocolate or soda to work or school. It's a lot less than specialty coffees or beverages at fast food stores.

• Try progressive suppers and potluck dinners with friends

. • Eat before you go shopping or to the movies.

• Let your kids spend their allowance (not yours) on snacks and treats that they want. They might wind up buying less junk foods if they have to use their own allowance.

When You Do Eat Out:

• Watch newspapers for advertised restaurant specials or coupons for discounts.

• Eat out at lunch rather than dinner. It's usually less costly.

• Stay with the specials. Appetizers, dessert and drinks can run up the tab quickly.

• Finally, plan ahead to eat out. Try to avoid impulse eating out.

Calcium Summit Unites Nutrition Experts

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In the midst of the nation's growing calcium deficiency crisis, leading health and nutrition organizations gathered Jan. 17 at the Calcium Summit II in Washington D.C., and pledged to encourage increased milk and dairy consumption among today's children and adolescents.

In Pennsylvania, nutrition and health professionals gathered in Pittsburgh to view the Summit, which was broadcasted live via a Web cast to help strategize new solutions to reach and teach America's youth on the importance of calcium for healthy bones throughout life. The local meeting was hosted by the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, which aired the national Web cast.

"Gathering these leading health and medical organizations is key to addressing kids' nutritional issues head-on," said Amy Rossi Mobley, spokesperson for PDPP. "Dairy farmers should be proud to sponsor an event where so many credible organizations are supporting the effort to encourage the consumption of three servings of dairy a day."

More than 20 nutritionists, government officials and educators gathered to develop an action plan to address a critical health concern facing children and adolescents: calcium deficiency. Also, more than 10 organizations supported the mission of the local Calcium Summit II: to help America's youth make improved dietary choices to achieve optimal calcium intakes. Nationwide, more than 40 organizations supported the mission of the Summit.

Nationally, nutrition and medical leaders at the Calcium Summit II developed an "agenda for action" to address the widespread calcium deficiencies among children and teen-agers. The action steps included:

• Showing parents how children can easily get at least three servings of dairy a day and encouraging parents to be role models for their children by consuming dairy products at mealtime, too.

• Offering more milk varieties in schools and fewer soft drinks so children can make healthy food choices easier.

• Increasing awareness with pediatricians to include a calcium check-up in their back to school physicals.

As a first step, dairy producers and processors — through the respective checkoff programs — announced a new program providing $30,000 in nutrition education grants for community-based programs to help increase kids' and teens' calcium intake.

Vinegar Hints

• If you can fruits or vegetables, wipe off the outside of the jars with white vinegar after they are sealed. The vinegar will keep mold from appearing if you have a damp storage area.

• Add a teaspoon of white vinegar to any gelatin recipe in the hot summer months to keep molded salads or desserts firm.

• If you like to use empty peanut butter or mayonnaise jars, be sure to rinse them out with white vinegar to get rid of the original food odor.

HEALTHY MEALS MADE EASY

Everybody wants to improve their health, but sometimes it seems like just too much work to go to the gym or stick to a "healthy" diet. There is, however, a quick and easy way to improve your health—delicious Alaska canned salmon. In fact, Alaska canned salmon contains four times the amount of omega-3 fatty acids and 20 times the amount of calcium found in canned tuna*

Omega-3 fatty acids are the "good" fats you've been hearing about. Although fat is necessary for energy and certain nutrients, for many years almost any kind of fat was considered bad for the diet. Recent research, however, has shown that certain kinds of unsaturated fats—or fatty acids—actually protect and promote good health. Among the most important fatty acids are the omega-3s, which can protect the heart from disease, improve immune and inflammatory conditions and reduce the risk of certain cancers (particularly breast cancer—see sidebar for more information).

Your body cannot make omega-3 fatty acids, so it's necessary to obtain them through your diet. Omega-3s are unique to seafood, and particularly unique to rich fish like Alaska salmon.

Alaska canned salmon also contains delicate, edible bones that are rich in calcium and magnesium. Pressure-cooked in the can, they are so soft they can be easily blended into the salmon with a few swishes of a fork.

Alaska canned salmon also contains large amounts of selenium, vitamin E, zinc and low-fat protein, which are all known to strengthen immune systems.

So improving your health is easy! Just use versatile Alaska canned salmon in your favorite tuna recipes: sandwiches, casseroles, pastas and salads. Or use Alaska canned salmon in family favorites such as tacos, pizza or a Teriyaki Bowl. Start with a can of Alaska Pink or Alaska Red (or Sockeye) salmon. Pink salmon has a mild flavor, while Red/Sockeye salmon has a richer, more intense flavor and color. Both of these types of salmon are packed in a "traditional" pack—with skin and bones. Skinless, boneless Alaska Pink salmon is now available in most markets too.

Once you try Alaska canned salmon, you'll be hooked. Fished from pristine Alaska waters that produce seafood with premium flavor and texture, nothing has been added but a pinch of salt for flavor. Alaska canned salmon is full of natural vitamins, minerals and nutrients that will help you stay healthy. Enjoy it often, and you'll be in the pink!

For more detailed omega-3 information plus quick and easy recipes, visit www.alaskaseafood.org or call 1-800-854-3054 (ask for part #127-015).

Alaska Salmon Tacos

1 can (14 3/4 ounces) or 2 cans (7 1/2 ounces each) Alaska salmon, drained and flaked
1/2 cup fresh or bottled nonfat salsa
12 (6 1/2 inch) corn tortillas
3/4 cup fat-free refried beans
1/4 cup fat-free Cheddar cheese
2 cups cabbage or lettuce, shredded
3/4 cup fresh tomato, chopped
Salsa to taste
Chopped cilantro, optional

Mix Alaska salmon with salsa and set aside.

Place tortillas on sheet pans and portion beans and cheese evenly in tortillas. Place in 350°F oven until warm and cheese is melted (5–8 minutes). Remove from oven and divide salmon mixture evenly among tortillas. Top with cabbage or lettuce and chopped tomatoes (portioned evenly). If using soft tortillas, fold over. Serve with extra salsa and chopped cilantro, if desired.

Makes 12 tacos or 6 servings.

Variation: Salmon mixture may also be used as burrito or tostada filling.

Add vegetables and stir-fry for one minute. Stir in reserved salmon liquid and teriyaki sauce. (Add sesame oil and ginger, if desired.) Add salmon; reduce heat to medium, cover and cook 4–5 minutes until vegetables are crisp-tender. Stir just before serving. Portion 1 to 1 1/2 cups rice into bowl; top with salmon-vegetable blend.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

When we are housebound due to Allen's back operation, we have time to watch the birds and other animals outside. This morning I saw a red fox chase a squirrel across the snow in the meadow to a telephone pole — the squirrel made it to safety.

The blue jays seem to eat all of the sunflower seeds out of the bird feeder. Then the cardinals, sparrows and downy woodpeckers clean up the other seeds. We've even seen bluebirds eating the holly berries at the front porch. Apparently, they do not go south in the winter.

Our children have come to help and have gone home again. Now it is just my husband and I. He needs to do a lot of exercises to strengthen his leg and he does not enjoy them. At least, he is slowly improving. At one point in my life it was hard for me to realize that people could not dress themselves. Well, it does come to that if you cannot bend your back. Your feet seem miles away down there on the floor.

Three of our children stayed here overnight and I tried to feed them good meals. We had beef heart, hamburgers, ham and chicken corn soup plus lots of vegetables. I also baked a chocolate cake and made a special dessert with some sour cherries that I picked with the grandchildren this summer.

My daughter and I tried two different restaurants the other week. One was an elegant one in Leola. The kind with linen tablecloths and very big napkins. The food was good but very different. Then on another day we went to a place that my sister calls a "hole in the wall." Actually, it was not that bad as it had the necessary chairs and tables. Here we got some crab cakes which we enjoyed.

ANSWER — A reader from Big Spring wanted to find a recipe for old-time flannel cakes. Thanks to Charlotte Hoffman, Spring Grove, and Janet Spangler, York Springs, for sending recipes. Janet writes that the Farm Women Society cookbooks contain several recipes. She loves that cookbook and rarely uses any other cookbook. For those who want to order the Farm Women Society cookbook, call Naomi Bupp at (717) 235-3426.

Flannel Cakes

1 egg
2 tablespoons sugar
1½ cups milk
2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter, melted

Beat egg, add sugar. Combine dry ingredients and add alternately with milk. Add melted butter last. Bake on a hot griddle. Serve with butter and syrup.

Charlotte writes, "My mother made pancakes that she called flannel cakes, which tasted delicious. This is her recipe."

Grandma's Pancakes (Flannel Cakes)

3 eggs
2½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1½ cups sour milk (to make sour milk, put 2 teaspoons vinegar to milk).

Use a hot griddle.

Johnny Cakes (Corn)

1 egg
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 tablespoon sugar
1 heaping tablespoon flour
1½ cups milk

Add enough corn meal to make a batter (about ½ cup) corn meal. Fry on a hot griddle.

Multi-Grain Pancakes

¼ cup all-purpose flour
¼ cup whole wheat flour
½ cup buckwheat flour
½ cup cornmeal
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ cup egg substitute
1 cup skim milk
1 tablespoon Canola oil

Stir together flour and baking powder. Combine egg substitute, milk, and oil; add all at once to flour mixture, stirring until blended but still lumpy. Pour about ¼ cup batter onto a hot, lightly greased griddle or heavy skillet for each standard-size pancake. Cook until golden brown, turning to cook on other side when pancakes have a bubbly surface and slightly dry edges. Makes about eight (4-inch) pancakes or about 30 dollar-size pancakes.

Variation: 1¼ cups all-purpose white flour may be used instead of the multi-grain flour.

ANSWER — Elizabeth from Schuylkill County, wanted a recipe for a simple cream cheese frosting. Thanks to Mrs. Ray Keeny and several readers for sending recipes.

Cream Cheese Frosting

8-ounces cream cheese, softened
¼ pound butter
2 teaspoons vanilla
1½ cups confectioners' sugar

Blend ingredients until smooth.

Cream Cheese Frosting

8-ounces cream cheese, softened
1 stick butter
1 pound powdered sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 tablespoons milk

Mix well.

ANSWER — Ralph Nissley wanted to know how to make buttermilk. Thanks to Mrs. Ray Keeny, New Freedom, for these instructions: Get some thick cream. Let set out of refrigerator an hour or more to warm. Churn butter. The liquid part is the buttermilk. I use my food processor to churn. Run it on high until butter forms then on low to gather the butter. Take butter out and wash it a few times in water to wash all the buttermilk out; salt it and you have some good butter to use, as well as the buttermilk. Buttermilk can be used in any recipe that calls for buttermilk or sour milk. It can be churned by putting cream in a quart jar and shaking it until butter forms.

Cocoa And Dark Chocolate Show Positive Effects On LDLs

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A Penn State-led study has found that a diet high in flavonoid-rich cocoa powder and dark chocolate had favorable effects on LDL ("bad" cholesterol) when compared with a diet that limited or excluded other flavonoid sources such as tea, coffee, wine, onions, apples, beans, soybeans, and orange and grape juices.

Dr. Penny Kris-Etherton, Penn State distinguished professor of nutrition and leader of the study, says, "Cocoa and chocolate are fun foods, and I think these results show that they can contribute to a healthy diet — especially if they are used in forms that don't include large amounts of fat and sugar. However, cocoa and chocolate shouldn't be considered significant sources of flavonoids in the same category with fruits and vegetables which also have fiber, vitamins and minerals."

Here's a recipe to enjoy.

Prince Hotel

Portion Control Or Food Choices?

COLUMBUS, Ohio — What's more important in helping you lose weight: How much you eat or what you eat?

Thanks a lot for the trick question. The answer isn't as simple as you might want it to be.

On the one hand, lack of portion control is increasingly being blamed for the "fattening of America." Extra large or "biggie" portions at fast-food restaurants, "big grab" snack-size potato chip bags, and giant-size candy bars all pack in many more calories than more traditionally sized portions.

But consumers are suckers for them — partly because these foods taste good and people like to eat a lot of them, and partly because consumers get a better deal by buying the larger size. There's also the phenomenon ingrained during childhood known as the "clean plate club."

Nutritionists recommend ignoring all these cues and concentrating on one that counts the most: Stop eating when you're no longer hungry — even if those french fries were a bargain, even if the food isn't gone yet.

One thing that would help is for people to learn what a serving size really is. A three-ounce portion of meat — one serving, according to nutritionists — is about the size of a deck of cards. One slice of bread or a half-cup of pasta counts as a serving.

On the other hand, eating certain kinds of foods can allow you fill up your plate and eat to your heart's content without over-indulging. Include more fruits, vegetables and fiber in your meals, and you'll feel fuller on fewer calories. For example, the next time you have pasta, top the noodles with some onions, mushrooms, celery, zucchini and chopped spinach sauteed in cooking wine. Then top everything with your favorite sauce. You'll significantly increase the nutrients, fiber and the actual volume of food you eat without increasing calories by much at all.

How much you eat is important, but so is what you eat. Pay attention to both, and you'll be one "biggie" step ahead.

Micah and Josiah chase the pigs into pens.

Growing Up To Be A Pig Farmer

At right, Micah, 5, already knows more about pig farming than most adults.

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

REINHOLDS (Lancaster Co.) — Micah Martin only turned five years old this week, but he already knows more about raising pigs than most adults.

Micah tries out his new birthday present — a walkie-talkie.

"I chase feeder pigs, scrape manure, and actually help wean too," Micah said of helping his dad Delvin and Grandpa Earl Martin with their 300-head sow operation near Adamstown.

Without stumbling over the unusual vocabulary for a five-year old, Micah explains, "I help move the little pigs from their mommies to the nursery. And I help with gestation moving, too. When the pigs are bred, we move them back in the pens again so they have more babies. If they don't breed good, we use AI."

Micah said that in the firing rooms, he scratches the back of the pigs to make them get up.

"They really squeal. Then I help catch them so my dad can process them."

Micah explains that processing means the pigs get their teeth and tails clipped, get iron shots, and the males are castrated.

"One time my dad let me help clip the tails, but most of the time I only catch the pigs," Micah said.

Pigs are sorted by size and Micah helps chase them into the right pen.

"Get me up in the dark," Micah often begs his dad. Micah likes to be awakened at 4:30 a.m. every Tuesday morning because that is the day the truck comes to pick up the finished pigs.

"I wear warm stuff," Micah said of helping on cold, dark winter mornings. "We take our clothes off in the barn and put on coveralls, hats, and boots."

When the work is finished, Micah changes clothes again, and the dirty clothes are washed in the washer and dryer in the barn.

"It's not fun being stinky," Micah said of the pig odor that clings to his clothing. "I need to take a bath when I come into the house."

His mother, Bonita, said Micah also needs to take a nap on the days that he arises at 4:30 a.m.

Inside the house, Micah likes to keep busy. He said he likes to help his mommy. He dries dishes, sets the table, and makes his own bed every morning "without my mommy telling me."

He also enjoys playing with his 2-year-old sister Hannah. They especially like playing with the walkie-talkies that he got as a birthday present. And during a recent snow, Micah loved sledding. He also enjoys lessons in preschool workbooks.

"I really like when my cousin Josiah comes to help in the barn, too," Micah said. Josiah, 4, is the son of Darryl and Andrea, Mohnton. Another special friend is his Uncle Joshua, who is 12, and a brother to Micah's dad.

The family also raise several goats and sheep. Micah likes to help feed the sheep and goats, but prefers the pigs.

"I want to grow up to be a pig farmer," Micah said.

Sounds like he already is a pig farmer.

Me And My M&M's

DR. MARILYN KERN- FOXWORTH

I have always liked M&M's. The most diverse, multicultural, integrated candy in the world. You have your red ones, your orange ones, your brown ones, your green ones and your blue ones. All in one package. All co-existing together.

One color doesn't think that it is superior to the other. One color doesn't discriminate against the other. All colors are the same size, shape and weight. All colors look different on the outside, but have the same ingredients on the inside. M&M's all have the same flavor...and they taste good.

Wouldn't it be nice if, like M&M's, our prejudices melted into the abyss like chocolate melts in our mouth, and all people were judged by what was inside rather than the color you see on the outside?

If candy can be prejudice free, why can't we?

Micah also helps feed the sheep.

Lancaster Society 14

Members of Farm Women 14 never tire of the auction which is the feature of every September meeting at the home of President Gladys Esbenshade. Before the fun time, hostesses Virginia Ranck and Donna Coleman served a delightful treat. Hospice has been named as county project for which member made a contribution — also a gift certificate will be given to Christ's Home.

Since the Lancaster County Farm Women's Day fell on Sunday, an evening worship service was held at Farm and Home Center.

Anna Marie Groff and Marion Rohrer were hostesses for the Nov. 12 meeting at the home of Ellen Newswanger. Anna Marie's devotional from Col. 2 challenged members to a life of gratitude versus grumbling. Sewing Committee Chairman Helen Herr introduced a project "ugly quilt" for homeless sponsored by Water Street Mission. Historian Henry Benner entertained members with a slide presentation on Lancaster County Homesteads — barns, houses, tobacco sheds, silos, even outhouses. Interesting architectural features were seen and explained on the pictorial journey throughout Lancaster County.

The season of Christmas began for Farm Woman 14 on Dec. 6 with a banquet at the Leola Family Restaurant. The Medical Doctor Richard Jackson family's music was not only entertaining but how refreshing to see a busy father giving priority time with family.

Lancaster Society 18

Farm Women Society 18 met Dec. 15 with Martha Stoner as hostess. Ruth Rohrer led in devotions. Roll call was answered by showing a favorite Christmas decoration and telling why it was special.

The program was given by the telling of a trip to Australia by the hostess's daughter. The business meeting was presided over for the last time by Ruth Landis. The next president, Mildred Kreider, received the gavel and records and will serve for the next two years. Sixteen member and guests attended the Christmas meeting.

Berks Society 1

Berks County Society of Farm Women, Group 1, met December 13, at the Historic Pleasantville Inn for their Christmas party with 12 members and 7 guests in attendance.

After a delicious meal secret pals were revealed and new ones selected followed by a fellowship hour.

The Berks County Society 1 met again on Jan. 9 at the home of Ella Richard, Oley, during an afternoon meeting. Nine members answered to roll call stating if they had gone out to view the various displays of Christmas lights over the holiday season.

A motion was made and passed to make a donation to the Project Graduation project sponsored by the Oley Valley School District for their graduation bash project held the night of graduation from that district. A thank you note was read from Santa's Corner-Berks Heim, thanking the society for the various gifts and cookies the group donated for that worthy cause.

Spring rally date of May 15 to be held at the York Expo Center have been discussed with plans in the works for attendance.

Next meeting will be a luncheon meeting at the Pleasantville Diner on February 13 with members being asked to bring something red in a brown paper bag and to wear the color red.

Lancaster Society 20

Lancaster Farm Women Society met on Thursday, Jan. 3 at the home of Nancy Lefever with Vivian Trout as co-hostess.

Following the refreshments Nancy had a reading and scripture from Romans 12:9-21. The Lord's Prayer was prayed in unison and the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag was used.

Nancy, the president, presided at the business meeting. One card had been sent to a shut-in.

For the roll call, the 14 members and the visitor all responded by saying whether or not they had sauerkraut. Jean Ressel had two reading "Promise Yourself" and "On Monday."

Guest speaker was Courtney Humphries whom the society sponsored for the Solanco Pageant. Members thoroughly enjoyed her reading "Never Give Up" as it was so well done and had a worthwhile lesson.

The meeting closed by singing "Brighten The Corner" to meet in February with Jane Ferguson.

York Society 26

Nine members of York County Society 26 met at Yocumtown Church and car-pooled to Wolfgang Candies for a tour of their candy factory and to the Golden Corral for lunch and the January meeting.

President Jan Sechler conducted the business meeting.

The members read the by-laws.

Collect was read by Martha Yost.

Donations were made to Fairview, Goldsboro, Lewisberry, and Newberrytown Fire Companies.

Doris Goodlander and Jan Sechler gave reports on the State Convention.

Mary Conley had a January birthday.

Doris Goodlander and Janet Lahr won the door prizes.

Beef Industry Youth Spokesperson Will Skate At Olympics

DENVER, Colo. — Beef industry youth spokesperson Sasha Cohen is headed for the Winter Olympics, having made the U.S. Figure Skating Team after winning the silver medal at the 2002 State Farm U.S. Figure Skating Championship in Los Angeles on January 12.

At the same time, the U.S. Figure Skating Association (USFSA) has renewed its partnership with the beef industry, paving the way for more nutrition information to be distributed throughout its communication network.

Beef industry nutrition education programs are funded by beef producers through their $1-per-head checkoff and are coordinated for the Cattlemen's Beef Board (CBB) and state beef councils by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA).

Cohen placed second at the Los Angeles competition, coming in behind Michelle Kwan. They and Sarah Hughes, who placed third, will represent the U.S. at the Olympics next month in Salt Lake City. USFSA officials select the three female figure skaters to be on the U.S. Olympic Team generally based on how skaters place at the State Farm championship.

Through a 2001 partnership between the USFSA and NCBA, Sasha Cohen has been serving as a spokesperson for NCBA's nutrition education campaign aimed at America's preteen girls. In this role, Sasha has been talking to editors of leading youth magazines and web sites about eating smart with beef, as well as addressing this subject on the beef industry's www.burgertown.com web site.

In renewing this partnership, NCBA has agreed to work with the USFSA to provide nutrition information to its www.usfsa.org web site and feature more nutrition topics in communications to clubs and to the readers of Skating magazine.

"The USFSA is committed to improving the lives of young athletes and looks forward to working with the NCBA for a second year to provide nutrition information to skaters," says USFSA President Phyllis Howard.

Sasha, 17, is a California native who began skating when she was seven. Nine years later, she won the silver medal at the 2000 State Farm U.S. Figure Skating Championships in Cleveland, Ohio. Most recently, Sasha won the 2001 Finlandia Trophy competition in Helsinki, Finland, and the bronze medal at the 2001 Trophee Lalique in Paris.

"Eating right builds my body and makes me feel great on the inside and outside," says Sasha. "I hope to show girls that eating smart and choosing their favorite foods like beef can help them reach their peak performance in all areas of their lives. Beef is part of my routine."

Jim and Susan Kauffman enjoy sampling dishes made by their friends.

Calcium, Kidney Stone Link Is Complex

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Years ago, my father had a kidney stone, and he always warned me against consuming too much calcium as an adult. However, I just heard about a study that says meat and salt are the culprits, not calcium. Is that true?

Actually, for several years researchers have questioned the assumption that there's a link between high calcium diets and the formation of kidney stones. Most kidney stones are formed by either calcium oxalate or calcium phosphate, but increasing evidence reveals that calcium in the diet is not the culprit — even if you've already suffered a kidney stone.

In a recent issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, an Italian study added to the evidence. The study included 120 men who had already had at least one kidney stone.

Half were put on a low-calcium diet; half were put on a diet low in salt and extremely low in protein allowing only three-quarters of an ounce of meat per day. Within five years, 23 men on the low-calcium diet had another kidney stone, compared with only 12 on the low-salt, low-protein diet.

That study adds to information from a 1997 study published in the Annals of Internal Medicine and conducted by Brigham and Women's Hospital and Harvard Medical School.

Researchers analyzed the diets of almost 92,000 women ages 34-59 who are participating in the ongoing Nurses' Health Study. In that study, women who consumed more calcium had the lowest incidence of kidney stones. Women with higher sugar and sodium consumption had a higher incidence.

It's important to note that these studies looked at consumption of dairy foods, not calcium pills. If you take calcium supplements, do so during meals.

While researchers continue to study the role of calcium, one thing is known for sure: The more liquid you consume, the less likely you are to suffer from kidney stones. The American Foundation for Urologic Disease suggests drinking as many as 12 large glasses of fluid every day — at least half of which should be water. Doing so helps prevent the urine from being concentrated, reducing the risk of the formation of crystals — what the foundation calls "the building blocks of kidney stones."

ANSWER — Joyce Deitrich, 153 Dotterer Rd., Lenhartsville, PA 19534-9585, lost a glass cover for her Guardian Service and wanted to know how to have it replaced? Thanks to David Simpler who writes that he has a Guardian glass oval lid that measures 13x10¼-inches number GR91. Write to him at 2645 Old Field Pt. Rd., Elkton, MD 21921.

ANSWER — Daryl Sempster, 2645 Old Field Park, Elkton, Md., recently purchased a lovely old Sunbeam Mix-Master at a flea market. The owner's manual shows attachments such as a knife sharpener, meat grinder, silver polisher, coffee grinder, can opener, potato peeler, etc. She wanted to purchase some of the attachments. Barton Sensenig III writes that he has a Mix Master power plus mixer slicer/shredder attachment 94-351 that he will sell for $4 plus postage. It is in very good condition and fits models 1-150, 1-161, 1-163.

ANSWER — A reader has a problem with peas and sugar pea plants getting brown specks and turning yellow and dying before maturing and asked what spray or dust prevents this? Thanks to Emma Leid who suggests taking a soil sample which will probably reveal too high a ph or a lacking mineral. She also recommends applying Miracle Grow on a weekly basis as soon as the crop comes up.

ANSWER — A reader wanted information on the Lancaster County race track at the Buck. Thanks to Henry King, Drumore, who writes that the Buck truck pull is located about 18 miles south of Lancaster City on the right side of Rt. 272S. Phone number for the Buck tractor pulls is (717) 284-2139.

ANSWER — Kenneth Wirz, White Hall, Md., had been searching for a piece of Guardian Service cookware to complete his mother's set. He thanks Pat Elligson, Md., for helping him obtain the piece.

Pennsylvania's Heartlands —Stories Of Its Rural People

HUMMELSTOWN (Dauphin Co.) — Author of Pennsylvania's Heartlands, 1860s-1960s (Stories of its Rural People), the former Susan Wert spent her first 30 years in Juniata County before modern-day technology became part of rural America. Vogt got her start as a professional writer at a small-town newspaper in the 1970s, before marrying Harold D. Vogt and moving to Hummelstown in 1979.

Serving as a contributing editor at The Times In Port Royal, leading up to the 1976 USA Bicentennial, Sue penned and composited four columns each week — a front page feature story; her own personal column, 'Input-Feedback,' 'Looking Back through The Times,' and 'I Remember When.'

Most of those interviewed for the latter column had been born in the late 1800s. These "old-timers," as they liked to call themselves, used this phrase over and again, "I Remember When" before the storytellers drifted off recalling personal, historical (and many times) humorous accounts of rural life. Now the stories from that column have been composed into a book call Pennsylvania's Heartlands, 1860s-1960s — (Volume 1: Stories of Its Rural People).

Dedicated to Sue's Grandfather, Charles H. Wert (whose stories are included), the "Heartlands" book has this saying in the inside front cover: "When old people die, it is like a library burning down."

Many of the people interviewed were Grangers. This 120-page book is the first of a proposed miniseries on the "Heartlands." Only 1,250 copies were printed.

Vogt's book has many wonderful, old-time photos, including three 1898 photos of Francis L. Cooper (a photographer from Juniata County) whose award-winning rural photography exhibit was featured at Paris, France, in 1900.

Also featured in this book are photos and stories about the old-time general stores/post offices, mills/sawmills, village baseball teams/musical bands, Granges, the 1930's CCC Camps, and barn-raisings (and amount of food prepared for the same from Amish-Mennonite family lineages connected to the author — the Eshs-Yoders from Big Valley/Mifflin County.

Vogt will be a speaker at the Elizabethtown Library, 10 Market St., on Saturday, March 16, from 1-3 p.m. with a book-signing afterwards.

Signed copies of this book may be obtained at the Strasburg Railroad Museum Gift Shop, the Pennsylvania State Museum at Harrisburg, or by calling the author at (717) 566-5700. Mail orders for $25 should be made payable Desktop Editing Co., (c/o Susan W. Vogt), 1 Scout Lane, RR #3, Hummelstown, PA 17036.

Octogenarian Continues To Coax Melodious Sounds From Antique Players

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — Herb Detrich never intends to stop learning.

An octogenarian, he and his wife, Aggie, enjoy life to its fullest. Their interests are individual and varied and sometimes cross amicably into each other's territory.

Herb collects antique musical players such as band organs, orchestrions, handroller organs, Edison phonographs, disc players, hand played street organs, calliopes, and a Wurlitzer Model juke box. Often, he purchases an instrument in totally unworkable condition and considers it a challenge to make it play. If he needs an aesthetic touch, Aggie will dress it up either with a "Grandma Moses" style painting or one of the many dolls she either repairs and redresses or makes herself.

The instruments produce sounds ranging from melodic and sweet to loud and sometimes ear splitting.

Thirty years ago, Herb who has always had an interest in almost anything from photography to building, was searching for a band organ when he discovered one overlooked by many.

"It sounded like an old dead duck," he says. "It had been built in 1895 and most considered it a piece of junk."

Herb put his skills to work and today it plays flute, violin, trumpet, trombone, sax, glockenspiel, bass drum, cymbal and snare drum.

If need be, Herb can make his own pipes.

The charming, sprawling home of the Detrichs was built by Herb. "We started with just three rooms," Aggie remembers. As our family grew and our interests increased, Herb kept building." Today there are 15 rooms the most interesting being the "hobby" room.

Included among the vast collection of instruments in Herb's hobby area are an organ-Melodia made in 1879. Folded paper music for this instrument was available only at Sears and Roebuck.

There is a Mascotte Organ made by the Merrett Gally Company ordinarily known for their expertise with printing presses.

A Gem Roller player was designed for the less affluent musical entertainment and sold for $2.98 in 1900.

Finding music for a German Organ built in 1828 had the Detrichs stumped. Then, they discovered the Internet and purchased rolls from England.

Another organ plays the accordion made especially for Herb. He made his own drums for a military band organ.

A street piano found at a warehouse in deplorable condition now looks like new. "It goes out of tune very easily and I'm working on that problem," Herb says.

QA Wurlitzer model 1015 jukebox was built in 1946. Remember when you bought a hamburger for a quarter and then listened to five tunes for the same amount?

A Wurlitzer player piano, entirely made by Deitrich plays such old time favorites as "After The Ball Is Over" or, "I Left My Heart In San Francisco."

"Kids love to come through here," he said. "But most of the time, they never heard the songs that the instruments play."

Herb says his love for the old instruments began with wanting a player piano. When he and Aggie finally found one, he wanted to orchestrate it himself.

"I didn't want him to do that," Aggie remembers. "Then, we bought the second one which he promptly began to orchestrate. When he was finished, I understood. From then on, he got no argument from me."

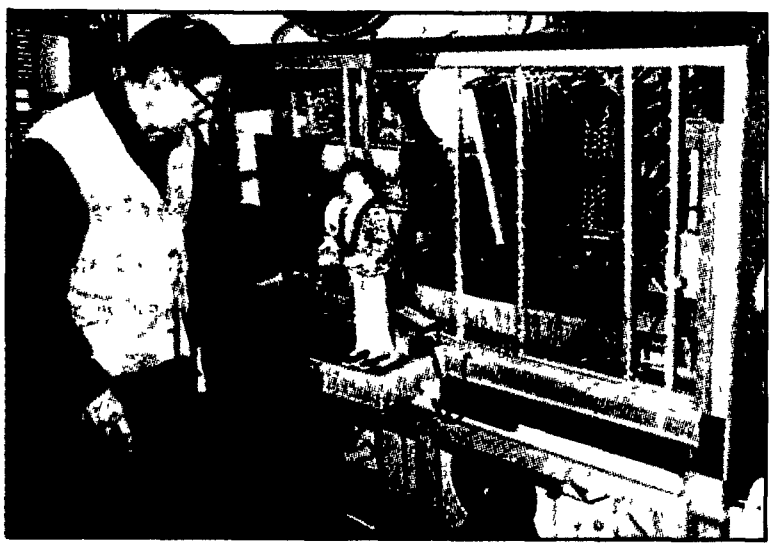
His love for mechanical music is sometimes evident to the whole neighborhood when he plays an old Carolina Belle Tower which he hooked to a speaker on the roof.

Other collections include an array of old telephones, various photographs, telegraph keys, and a case full of mouth organs.

An orchestra street organ is part of Detrich's fascinating collection.

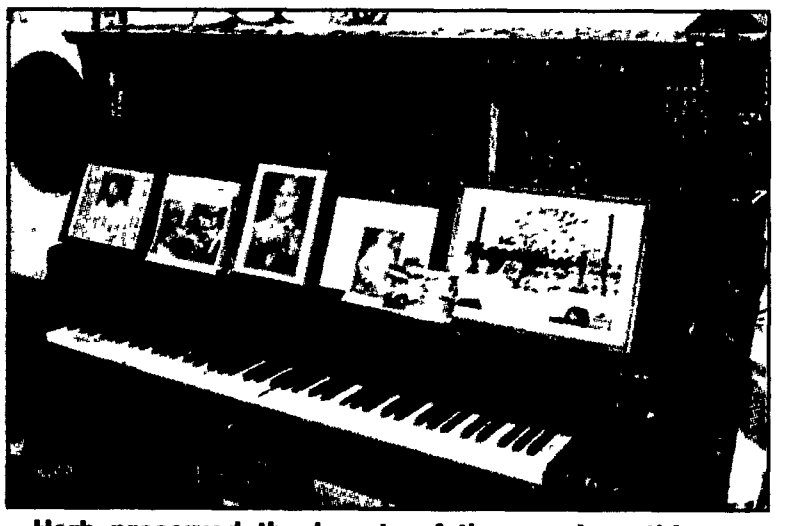
Melodies on this instrument are produced with paper rolls.

The area's largest band organ can produce an ear splitting sound.



An Effanbee doll of Liberace adorns a German Organ, which is an idea credited to Detrich's wife Aggie.

This band organ sounded like a "dead duck" when purchased. Today it is in good working condition and adorned with one of Aggie's paintings.



Herb preserved the beauty of the wood on this gorgeous hand-carved player piano and installed glass so spectators can watch the hammers work.

Modernism The "Wright" Way

Can you imagine a world without buffet and patio dining? Or, casseroles that are equally at home at a backyard cookout and an indoor party?

That was pretty much the way it was before Russel and Mary Wright changed the way people entertained. These days his ceramic dinnerware and spun aluminum serving pieces are not only enjoying a second life but being eagerly collected.

Although the name Russel Wright has almost become synonymous with the look of modern designs, he actually began creating objects in the "Moderne" mode in the 1930s.

A new book "Russel Wright Creating American Lifestyle," published in conjunction with the opening of an exhibit at the Smithsonian Cooper-Hewitt National Design Museum is certain to whet the appetites of modernism collectors and, start them hunting for his less familiar designs of furniture, his early chrome-plated circus animal figures and decorative accessories.

It was those circus horses that led him to next design chrome-plated cocktail ware lined with silver. Too costly for the middle-class market, he began creating not only cocktail pieces but other dining accessories combining spun aluminum with touches of wood.

It was no accident that from the 1930s to the 1950s his designs were found in most every middle-class American home. Wright and his wife Mary were super promoters using every media tool available at the time from ads in newspapers and magazines to radio shows.

Wright's "American Modern" dinnerware introduced in 1939 changed the shapes of plates and serving pieces as well as color concepts. Plates lost their rims. Pitchers were elongated. Mixing and matching colors of a place setting appealed to young homemakers.

His influences were abstract and surrealist art.

Mary Wright, designed and created her only complete dinnerware line in 1946, Country Gardens, for Bauer pottery, Atlanta, Ga. The colors and forms had an Asian look. Unfortunately it didn't do well and was shortly discontinued.

However, the Iroquois Casual China line, introduced in 1946 offered a tempting array of colors including ripe apricot and pink sherbet and was successful.

Questions And Answers

Can you tell me anything about this small, old rocking chair? It is around 13 inches from the floor to the seat. A circle was originally cut in the seat that has been replaced with wood.

J.V. — Bristol, CT

What you have is a 19th century, Windsor, child's potty chair. It could sell in a shop for around $300.

We are curious as to the value of this teakwood and bronze flatware by "James, Bangkok, Thailand."

C.J.L. — Staten Island, NY

Sets such as yours were imported to the U.S. from the 1960s. They are brass and teakwood, not bronze and sell for around $100.

We found this picture in the trash. We cleaned it up. The artist is Eric Sloane. It shows a covered bridge and two children. What can you tell me?

H.K. — Punta Gorda, FL

You didn't say if this is a print or watercolor. However, I suspect from your photo it is a print. Unfortunately, I see it has lots of damage. Although oil paintings by Eric Cloane (1905-1985) sell for over $10,000, yours has no value.

Antique Detective

The Wrights put their then revolutionary entertaining concepts into a book, "Guide to Easier Living" published in 1950. It came just in time for the big American move to the suburbs. The middle-class housewife embraced the idea of easy care and easily moveable furniture. American Modern and Iroquois dinnerware were perfect for this casual entertaining.

Even more so was his line of plastic "Melmac" dinnerware named "Residential."

At the same time the Wrights created outdoor furniture and multi-purpose pieces for the Stratton Furniture Company of Hagerstown, Maryland. Among them were coffee and dining tables with built-in leaf extensions.

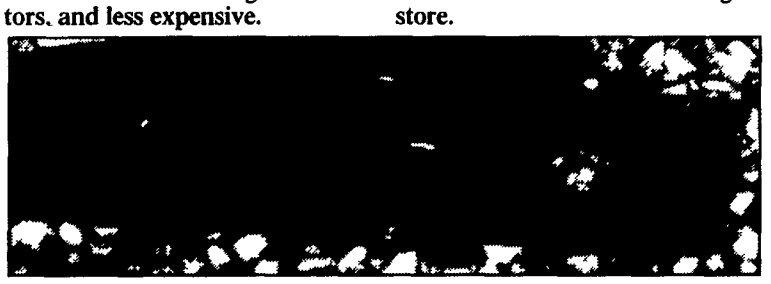
CLUES: The characteristics that have made some Wright dinnerware still plentiful, such as the long wearing "Casual" line, make it less interesting to collectors, and less expensive.

Contrast the current price of a Bauer pinch ashtray that can sell today for more than $400; and a Bauer flower pot priced more than $600. Also popular with collectors are the spun aluminum pieces. A casserole can be priced at more than $200 and a beverage set at $600 or more. Because of it's fragility Wright's glassware can run from the $80 to hundreds.

Spun aluminum pieces are signed. His early "Casual" line was signed and marked "China by Iroquois." Pieces made after 1950 are marked "Iroquois China" by Russel Wright.

Colors are important in determining price. So are unusual pieces that had limited production.

The new book on Russel Wright was co-authored by Donald Albrecht, Robert Schoenfeld and Lindsay Stamm Shapiro, published by Harry N. Abrams, New York, N.Y. and can be ordered from the museum gift store.



Gerald Byers, Dushore, wants to know if anyone has information about this chest of drawers. He thought it might have been made in Davidsville, home of Soap Hollow furniture. Each of the four drawers has a different picture on it.

❖ BUSINESS NEWS ❖

Hoober Inc., has committed to sponsoring this team with financial and parts support. Hoober's G.M. Tom Yohe said, "I enjoy watching the dedicated college students' engage in healthy competition with a true passion for agriculture." This will be the second year Hoober has been the sponsor for the Penn State Pullers.

Hoober Sponsors Team For Penn State Pullers

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Hoober Inc., has committed to being a platinum sponsor for a team entering the Penn State Pullers competition, May 31 through June 2 in Illinois.

This is the second year Penn State has held the Quarter Sales Tractor Design Contest sponsored by the American Society of Agricultural Engineers.

Student volunteers design and construct quarter scale tractors to compete on written design report, team presentation, tractor design, and a performance competition. Fifteen to 20 students have volunteered their time to the tractor competition.

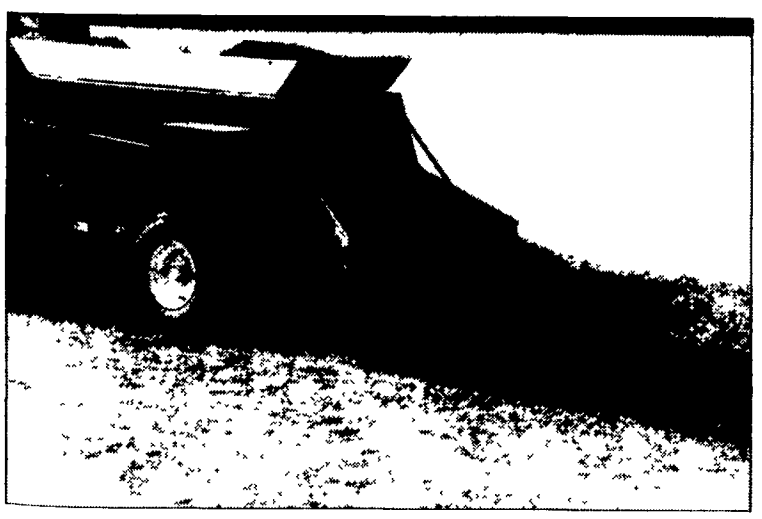
Hoober Inc., has committed to sponsoring this team with financial and parts support. Hoober's G.M. Tom Yohe said, "I enjoy watching the dedicated college students' engage in healthy competition with a true passion for agriculture." This will be the second year Hoober has been the sponsor for the Penn State Pullers.

Phil Eby, a senior in the agricultural program at Penn State, participated in last year's contest.

"The best part about the contest is the teamwork involved. Although highly competitive, everyone is there to help each other and have a good time," Eby said.

Last year's competition in Kentucky was both rewarding and educational for Eby's team. With a year of experience under his belt, Eby has high hopes for this year's competition in Illinois.

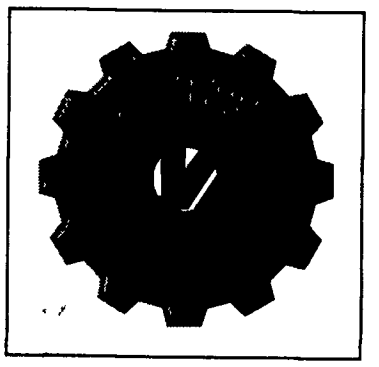
Spread In-Field Mix For Baseball



NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The Earth & Turf Multispread 200 and 200H are approved for spreading infield mix for baseball fields. The 15 cubic feet capacity units are available in ground drive or hydraulic drive versions, and make easy work out of previously backbreaking tasks.

GVM Celebrates Silver Anniversary

BIGLERVILLE (Adams Co.) — GVM Incorporated is celebrating its 25th year in the design and manufacturing of agricultural spraying and spreading equipment.



Mark Anderson, president of GVM, said "we are still going strong after 25 years."

GVM has recently introduced its newest product, the Predator, this year. The Predator compliments the already successful line of self-propelled Prowler sprayers and double duty spreaders. In addition, GVM also manufactures a complete line of pull type spreaders and pickup sprayers.

GVM has come a long way over the years, from initially selling only boom kits and foam marking systems, to a state-of-the-art manufacturing plant, as well as the full-time operation of three facilities located in Biglerville, Pa., Bellevue, Ohio, and Claremont, Ill.

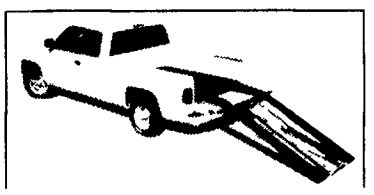
In addition, GVM also handles the distribution of several lines of parts and whole good products.

Loading Ramp Stores Away In Cargo Deck

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Etec Corporation has announced the introduction of its Load Pro Ramp System for all full size pickup trucks.

Load Pro's loading ramp is pulled out from the cargo deck, lowered to the ground, and you are ready to load your cargo.

The Load Pro cargo deck is constructed of reinforced steel, powder coated, and then sprayed with an antislip finish for better traction. The Load Pro cargo deck fits between the truck wheel wells. Installation is easy. Two brackets bolt out of sight to the vertical panel between the tailgate and the box.



Load Pro's loading ramp is pulled out from the cargo deck, lowered to the ground, and you are ready to load your cargo.

The Load Pro loading ramp stores away in the cargo deck. The loading ramp slides out on rails to the end of the tailgate for loading. After the cargo is loaded, the ramp is returned to the cargo deck and the tailgate is closed — completely concealing the cargo deck and loading ramp.

For additional information, contact Hamilton Equipment, Ephrata.

MidAtlantic Farm Credit Returns $5.8 Million In Earnings

WESTMINSTER, Md. — MidAtlantic Farm Credit, the region's largest agricultural lender, announces the payment of over $5.8 million to eligible member-borrowers as part of the cooperative lending organization's patronage refund program. The $5.8 million represents the revolvement of allocated surplus awarded to member-borrowers in 1995, and includes the memberships of the following former ACAs: Central Maryland, Chesapeake and Marva Farm Credits.

Other offices within MidAtlantic's region implemented patronage programs on differing schedules, and will be eligible for revolvement payments in future years.

"The $5.8 million in checks we returned to our members in December is perhaps one of the best reasons for doing business with Farm Credit — a financial cooperative owned by its member-borrowers," says Bob Frazee, president of MidAtlantic Farm Credit. "Our interest rates are competitive even without the effect of the patronage program, our loan programs are flexible and creative as any out there, and our commitment to customer service is unmatched in the financial services industry."

"Historically, MidAtlantic and its former associations have returned a minimum of 85 percent of its net earnings to its customers through the patronage refund program," continues Frazee. "It's MidAtlantic's way of saying thank you for your business." The ability to return 85 percent of its earnings to its member-borrowers after setting aside adequate funds for reserves is a good measure of the financial strength and stability of the financial cooperative.

MidAtlantic Farm Credit is the largest agricultural lender on the East Coast. It has approximately $1 billion in loans outstanding to over 9,000 members. It serves its customers through 18 branch offices located throughout the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia, Delaware, eastern Pennsylvania and mid-Maryland.

Hydraulic Power Adds Simplicity To Seed Jet II

COLCHESTER, Ill. — SystemsOne — a Yetter Company — has unveiled its new Seed Jet II with hydraulic power bulk seed handling unit.

"The Seed Jet II is the heart of a system that enhances productivity by eliminating the time wasted handling seed bags," said Derek Litchfield, research and development specialist for Yetter. "The hydraulic unit takes that further by eliminating the need for a gasoline engine to power the unit."

Litchfield points out that, because it runs on existing hydraulic power sources, the hydraulic Seed Jet II delivers results from a small, compact power unit that can be permanently mounted on a planter or drill, eliminating the need for separate transport of the unit and allowing permanent hydraulic hose connections. He also notes that the direct drive operation means that there are no belts or pulleys to adjust.

The hydraulic Seed Jet II requires only a 12-gpm hydraulic supply for operation, and features a pressure regulator to ensure maximum seed flow under a range of hydraulic pressures.

Litchfield says that, as with the motor-driven Seed Jet II, the hydraulic version is proven safe on soybean, corn, wheat, edible beans, rice or cotton seed. It saves time, cuts costs and reduces the hassle of handling heavy bags. The blower's airstream enters the air lock and the seed slides through a flexible, 35-foot stainless steel hose until it enters a decelerator that gently swirls it into a planter or drill box.

Hockman Auctions Sells Carter Lumber Company Real Estate

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Hockman Auctions successfully sold a former Carter Lumber Company property on Jan. 18.

The prime commercial property featured more than 10 acres and six large commercial buildings totaling approximately 43,000 square feet.

The "buzz" of the auction spread quickly throughout Pennsylvania and as far as Wisconsin because of advertising. Bidders gathered inside one of the spacious buildings to witness a bid of $550,000. This is one of the many recent successful real estate auctions for Hockman Auctions, including the sale of the former Berkeley County Jail and 16 other properties that same day, previously owned by the Moncure Chatfield-Taylor Corporation.

Hockman Auctions is a professional real estate auction company under the brokerage of Coldwell Banker Premier Properties, Steve DuBrueler, broker.

Maryland DHIA Report For December

The December Dairy Herd Improvement information for dairy herds from the DHI processing center in Provo, Utah. The list includes herds from Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. The information is listed by herd name, county association, number of cows in the herd and the average production per cow in the herd based on Energy Corrected Milk (ECM). ECM combines milk production and components.

The ECM formula is: (7.2 x lbs. protein) + (12.95 x lbs. fat) + (.327 x lbs. milk). To be included, the herd must have 10 cows averaging 65 pounds or more of ECM per cow, per day. All herds reported are on official DHI or DHIR test. Also listed are the top 10 herds in Maryland for the Brown Swiss, Guernseys, and Jerseys, and the top seven herds for Ayrshires.

UPTIME PLANTER SERVICE NOW!

Mr Planter Owner

Thank you for taking a minute to consider our services

Binkley & Hurst Bros Inc is offering a preseason inspection and evaluation of your planter for the purpose of identifying worn, broken, or malfunctioning parts Many times, seemingly insignificant wear will affect the accuracy of your planter more than you realize If nothing else, it may be time to have your finger pickup meters checked on our test stand Also, new innovations attachments and options are constantly being introduced which may be of interest to you for installation on your planter

Binkley & Hurst parts and service personnel are specifically trained and informed planter specialists ready to examine your planter with you! If you determine that the planting proficiency of your planter could be improved with our service, we would be happy to provide that service for you, and a technician would return at a later date to assist you in doing the work We encourage you to be part of the actual servicing so that any pointers or insight, which the technician may have for you with regard to planter operation, could be conveyed at that time

If you set up an appointment for a planter evaluation, you will be charged a flat fee

At time of inspection we will recommend to you any item needing attention also at that time we will remove your seed meters to take in for testing if you so desire

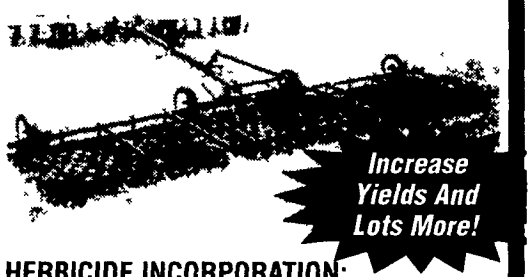
Binkley & Hurst Bros. Inc Offers This Low Cost Harrow

The Flex-i-ble Tine Harrow

Aerates and scarifies to stimulate growth, improve moisture penetration Breaks up manure to speed decomposition, reduce parasites Works in seeds after reseeding Maintains rings and tracks 4 to 42 ft widths Adjustable penetration Low maintenance



HERBICIDE INCORPORATION: Independent research using black light photography proves the Fuerst Harrow behind your disk or cultivator gives you "near perfect" incorporation in one pass – better than implements costing several times more! Shreds trash as it prepares & levels seedbeds

BROADCASTING SMALL GRAINS AND GRASSES: University of Illinois found overseeding by broadcasting followed by a Fuerst Harrow a superior combination, out-performing equipment costing more than 10 times as much. Pulled behind the broadcaster, it covers seed to desired depth in one time-saving operation

SHREDS STALKS: Shreds and spreads stalks in spring ahead of no-till and ridge-till planting

4 to 42 ft widths Flexes to cover every inch at 6-8 mph No maintenance Easy to use and store Insist on the original "Spreading Action" ® tines

SnowWolf Ultra Series
Heavy Duty Skid Loader Pows

Trip Cutting Edge Design
The SnowWolf Ultra features a trip cutting edge design which allows full down pressure for incredible scraping ability in forward or backdragging situations It eliminates "false tripping" from snow load and will only engage if you actually strike an immovable object

Massive Construction
The SnowWolf Ultra is designed to take abuse from the largest skid loaders At approximately 100 pounds per foot of plowing width, you know the Ultra means business

Food for Thought
Did you know that a modern skid loader with a high speed transmission and a SnowWolf Ultra will outplow a pickup truck under most plowing conditions? A cleaner job, closer to the obstacles (without worrying about your fenders), and more acres plowed in the same amount of time!

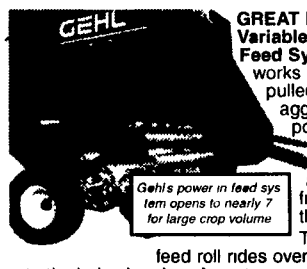
BALE with GEHL.

Wet or Dry - Made to Work in All Crop Conditions!

High Speed Custom Baling with a High Moisture Round Baler? Wet or dry with 100% Satisfaction! See Binkley & Hurst Bros and Take a Look at the ALL NEW

GEHL. MODEL RB 2580 ROUND BALER 4'x5'

Featuring the ALL-NEW Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System



GREAT BALING STARTS HERE Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System Here's how it works The incoming crop is pulled off the pickup by the aggressive action of two power in-feed rolls – a 6-inch-diameter pivoting power in-feed roll on top and an 8-inch diameter fixed power in-feed roll on the bottom

The top pivoting power in-feed roll rides over the crop as it is pulled into the bale chamber An extension spring keeps the toproll under constant downward force

The spring tension increases as the variable throat opens from a minimum of 3/4 of an inch up to a maximum opening of nearly 7 inches

The constant downward force of the pivoting upper powered in-feed roll, in combination with the fixed lower in-feed roll, both turning inward, pinches the crop and forces it into the bale chamber The stripping roll strips crop off the belt and forces it down to the incoming crop Adjustable scrapers on the stripping roll and pivoting roll eliminate buildup

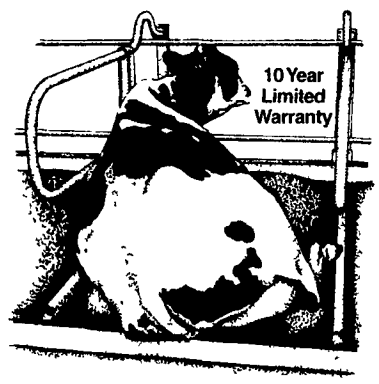
Waterbeds for Cows



ALANTA® Poly

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 10-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE
The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape. It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter.

SAFE
Thanks to the mod slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

- Offered to growers for $1 55/per lb in 60 lb bags plus freight

PA farmers have great hay crops with South Dakota alfalfa seed. Painterland Farms, Westfield, PA, John Painter said "The Trask's seed grew extremely well. We recommend it to anyone. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased.

Join the numerous farmers in the PA/NY area harvesting wonderful alfalfa from South Dakota seed
